LOVE ALLEGED AS MOTIVE FOR MURDER

Young Joseph Simerly Accused of Killing Cousin Because of Infatuation for Victim's Niece.

EVIDENCE IS CIRCUMSTANTIAL

Youth, It Is Charged, Renewed Old Quarrel on the Day of the Tragedy.

SAVANNAH, Mo., Sept. 29.—The murder of William A. Simerly, Jr., near Fillmore, this county, last Sunday, has produced a stir that has not been equaled in Andrew County since the mysterious killing of Frank Richardson, a prominent merchant of this place, a few years ago. The coroner's jury has charged Joseph Simerly with the crime and he now occupies a cell in the county jail at this place. Joseph Simerly was a cousin of the murdered man, and is only 19 years old. The man he is charged with having killed was 45. Young Simerly is a farmer youth of average intelligence. He stoutly protests that he is innocent.

Investigation reveals that William Simerly was shot twice with a shotgun, instead of being killed with an axe, as was at first reported. When his body was found in the brush heap, where it had been set on fire, the face was covered with blood and near him lay an axe. It was immediately supposed that it had been used in beating out his life, but it developed that the axe was not used.

The evidence against young Simerly is purely circumstantial.

Alleged Infatuation for Girl the Motive.

It is the theory of the officers that Joseph Simerly wanted his cousin out of the way because of his infatuation for the 14-year-old daughter of his cousin's sister, when Joseph Simerly is a son of Leonard Simerly, a farmer who lives near Hall's Station, on the Burlington road, a few miles south of St. Joseph. When but a few months of age his mother died and he was taken to the home of the mother of William Simerly to live. He remained there until a little more than a year ago, when because of his attachment for William Simerly's sister's little girl, William ordered the lad to leave the place, and to never return.

There are many Simerlys in the neighborhood and since that time Joseph has lived among the other relatives. For several months he has made his home at the farm of Charles Simerly, another cousin, and during all the time since he left the William Simerly place he has been making visits to the house in the absence of William.

Relatives Contradict the Boy's Story.

Last Sunday morning the accused youth went to the home of William Simerly, as he says, for some clothes. He says that while there he and William were not on speaking terms, there was no bad feeling between them. (Joseph says that as soon as he left the place he proceeded to the farm of one of the other Simerlys, a mile distant, where he went into a hay-mow and went to sleep. He says it was about 10 o'clock when he went to sleep and it was 5 o'clock in the afternoon when he woke up.)

The mother and sister of the murdered man do not tell the same story as that related by the prisoner. They say the youth and William Simerly exchanged no words at the farm Sunday morning, and that William again to leave the place and to stay away. They say that soon after Joseph left in an ugly frame of mind, William, remembering that there was a break in a fence surrounding a cornfield some distance from the house, took an axe and went to repair it. They never saw him alive again.

William Simerly was killed in the fence corner where he had gone to work and the body was dragged 100 yards to a ravine, where the effort was made to burn it.

TO UNVEIL CLARK MONUMENT

Ceremonies in Bellefontaine Cemetery Sunday Will Be Private.

A monument to Gen. William Clark, pioneer explorer of the Northwest, will be unveiled in Bellefontaine cemetery Sunday afternoon.

The ceremonies will be private and only the relatives and descendants of Gen. Clark and a few invited guests, including President D. R. Francis, Gen. John C. Bates and Major W. H. Will, will be present.

The monument was begun about two years ago. The bronze bust of hero was designed by William Ordway Partridge of New York and the granite work was designed by J. M. Cottrell, a New York architect. In the granite base is inscribed a brief history of Gen. Clark. The monument was erected as the result of a bequest for that purpose made by the late Jefferson Kearney Clark, the pioneer's son.

ANT BITES ARE FATAL TO MAN

Insects Swarmed Over Face While He Was Prostrated From Heat.

SPECIAL TO THE POST-DISPATCH. DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 29.—Edward Drescher, a young business man of Caldwell, Tex., was overcome by the heat in the public road yesterday afternoon and fell beside a nest of large red ants. Miles Long Mason passed by an hour later and discovered Drescher unconscious. His face, neck, hands and head were literally swarming with the red ants, which had attacked him so viciously that his features were hardly recognizable. Medical attention was procured, but Drescher died this morning. It is believed the ants killed him rather than the sunstroke.

LOST A FORTUNE IN DIAMONDS

Man Under Arrest Had Been Entertained in Her Socially Exclusive Home.

SPECIAL TO THE POST-DISPATCH. NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Lured to this city on Monday by a man who had won the confidence of her family, Mrs. Albert M. Ruhl, a wealthy Philadelphia woman, says she was beaten and robbed of a small fortune in diamonds that night by her companion while they were driving in the park. A partial list of the gems, which Mrs. Ruhl gave the police, is as follows: One diamond brooch, valued at $1000; one diamond ring, with three stones; one gold brooch, with seven large diamonds and 24 small ones, $500; one opal ring, with four diamonds; two solitaire diamond rings, one containing a stone of a carat and a half; one lady's gold watch, studded with diamonds; one wedding ring engraved "A. M. R. to M. F. S."

Charles S. Castleman, accused of being her assailant, is locked up in the West Thirtieth street police station. Castleman is only 22 years old and looks several years younger. The police also held a young man who was with him at the time of the arrest. His companion said he was Victor Anderson, an electrician of 19 West Twenty-third street. Castleman said he lived at 14 West Park street, Newark, N. J. Mrs. Ruhl told the police that she was a woman of some social prominence in Philadelphia, and that Castleman had been introduced to her several weeks ago as Charles D. Hullia. He represented himself, she said, to be a theatrical agent on the lookout for promising young women who were endowed with good voices for opera.

For several years Mrs. Ruhl has had his trionio aspirations, but her family objected to her going on the stage, and she was obliged to content herself with singing in a church choir. Hullia soon became a welcome visitor at her home, and finally persuaded Mrs. Ruhl's husband that she could soon win fame in opera if the opportunity only came.

ROOSEVELT'S POSITION FALSE

Republican Candidate for Governor in Tennessee, Littleton, Disclaims President's Negro Policy.

SPECIAL TO THE POST-DISPATCH. CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 29.—Jesse M. Littleton, Republican candidate for governor, brother of Borough President Littleton of Brooklyn, in a speech here disclaimed the attitude of President Roosevelt toward the race question, and said so far as social equality is concerned, he was a question, and said to dine with him he was indorsed for such action in the East, but condemned by the people of the South, Democrats or Republicans. "The negro knows that southern people are his best friends, and that half-breed have civilized and christianized him."

POLICE QUELLED CLASS RIOT

Columbia University Freshmen Attacked by Sophomores Bent on Rescuing Fellow Member.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The freshman class of Columbia University gathered for the first time in the history last night and held a vaudeville entertainment. They held the entertainment in Terrace Garden and imprisoned it in the hands of the police. Then 200 sophomores attacked the hall, forced an entrance and beat the 20 freshmen until the police reserve put an end to the pummeling. Clothing was torn and hats were smashed, and many noses bled, but the police would not make any arrests. The hall was considerably damaged, a lot of the railing being smashed, chairs demolished and other appearances made to suffer. A crowd of several thousand people was attracted to the scene.

STONED THE "STARVING" MAN

Germans Believed Exhibition at County Fair Was a Fake.

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—A close approach to a riot has occurred at Munich, where the annual county fair is being held. A professional stonewoman caused herself to be immured in a tower and completely walled in. She was seen only through a grating window. For some reason the people came to the conclusion that the affair was a fraud. A youth led the mob to the tower, crying, "he is a faker." Stones were thrown through the window at the man's head and the police hurried to the scene, arresting the youth. They then directed men to dig the frightened stonewoman from the tower and prohibited further exhibitions of the kind.

JUDGE SALE TARGET FOR BUTLER FORCES

Nomination of Circuit Judge to Succeed Himself on Bench Will Be Bitterly Opposed.

HE VOTED AGAINST WALSH

Harry B. Hawes Breaks Up Caucus
Called for Purpose of Naming City Ticket.

Harry B. Hawes, president of the Jefferson Club, met representatives of the Butler forces Thursday night at a caucus attended by 28 members of the Democratic city central committee and by Police Commissioners Blong and Hanlon, Tony Stue-ver, Charley Lemp and Chairman James McCauley of the Board of Election Commissioners.

The contest was short and sharp.
Mr. Hawes referred to the effort of 16 committees to name the city ticket to be voted on at the November election. He was surprised, he said, that the 16 should take such a burden on themselves.

"If we nominate a good ticket this year
the people will support it," said Mr.
Hawes.

"If we put up a bad ticket we cannot expect to elect it."

"If we discuss and decide our candidates here tonight, I don't know whether we will get a good or a bad ticket. I do not think any of you can tell that. In view of these facts, I move that this caucus refer the nomination of a city ticket to the open city convention and adjourn."

When the roll was called on this motion, the Butler men began voting no. It was soon apparent that Hawes had a majority of the committee, and the Butlers, in the "interest of harmony," quickly
changed their votes.

The action of the committee merely change the line of battle between the Hawes and Butler followers. The differences of the two factions will now be fought out at the primaries to be held Monday.

Butler Relies on Jimmie Miles.

Friends of Hawes are confident that he will win. On the other hand, the Butler people say that Harry will not loom up as a leader at all when the votes are counted.
To a large extent the Butlers are relying upon Constable Jimmie Miles to carry the Third, Second and Sixteenth wards.

If the Butlers cannot defeat the personnel of the local ticket they at least desire to cast up an overwhelming vote against those whom they have reason to suspect of unfriendliness.

Among those marked for slaughter by the Butler wing is Circuit Judge Moses N.
Sale.

Judge Sale objected to the proposed selection of Harry Walsh, James J. Butler's law partner, for justice of the peace of the Fifth district when a vacancy in that office occurred through the death of Nicholas Griffin, and the appointment of a temporary successor devolved on the circuit judges.

At the time that Judge Sale put his veto on the selection of Walsh the friends of the latter threatened him with dire political consequences.

At recent caucuses of the city committee
Judge Sale's name was the subject of frequent mention.

"You know he is against us and he can't go on that ticket," declared one of the committees.

Several Butler men on the city committee say they are willing to make certain concessions to Hawes at this time, because they want to hold the party intact until spring, when they expect to capture the majority nomination for Congressman Butler.

Mr. Butler, it is now announced, will not be a candidate for re-election to Congress, but his lieutenants say he would not object to succeeding Rolla Wells as mayor of St. Louis.

Politicians not in the Butler councils laugh at the suggestion that Butler has a majority aspiration. They point out that at most he could not control the vote of more than seven or eight wards,
and that some of these he might lose in an election.

Arrow BRAND

A Quarter brings big returns when it's invested in Arrow collars. It buys two of them—but that's not all. Consider the satisfaction that accrues to the wearer of a collar correctly designed, carefully made, and exactly suited to his neck—isn't it a bargain at any price? If you're wearing the "other kind," and you're willing to get the right kind without paying more, ask for ARROW.

Many women are denied the happiness of children through derangement of the generative organs. Mrs. Beyer advises women to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered with stomach complaint for years. I got so bad that I could not carry my children but five months, then would have a miscarriage. The last time I became pregnant, my husband got me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking the first bottle I was relieved of the sickness of stomach, and began to feel better in every way. I continued its use and was enabled to carry my baby to maturity. I now have a nice baby girl, and can work better than I ever could before. I am like a new woman."—Mrs. FRANK BEYER, 22 S. Second St., Meriden, Conn.

Another case which proves that no other medicine in the world accomplishes the same results as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

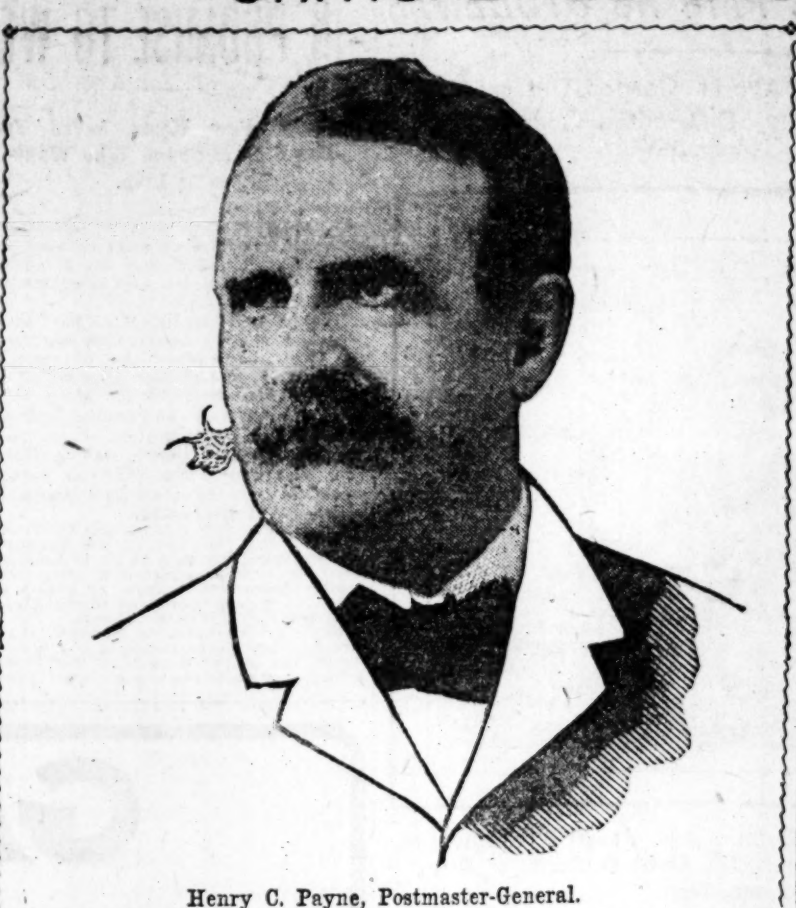

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was married for five years and gave birth to two premature children. After that I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it changed me from a weak, nervous woman to a strong, happy and healthy wife within seven months. Within two years a lovely little girl was born, who is the pride and joy of my household. If every woman who is cured feels as grateful and happy as I do, you must have a host of friends, for every day I bless you for the light, health and happiness Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought to my home. Sincerely yours, Mrs. MRS. P. WHARRY, Flat 31, The Norman, Milwaukee, Wis."

Actual sterility in woman is very rare. If any woman thinks she is sterile let her write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., whose advice is given free to all would-be and expectant mothers.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonial, which will prove the genuineness of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Lydia E. Pinkham, Mass., U.S.A.

PAYNE RALLIES FROM CRITICAL ILLNESS

Henry C. Payne, Postmaster-General.

Postmaster-General's Health, Which Has Not Been Good for Several Months, Is Causing Friends Uneasiness, Owing to Development of Heart Trouble.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—At the Arlington Hotel this morning it was reported that Postmaster-General Henry C. Payne was slightly better. His illness, serious however, as marked symptoms of heart trouble have developed. Mr. Payne returned recently from a trip in the West and appeared much improved, though his health has been poor for a long time. He went to the White House to attend the meeting of the cabinet on Tuesday and that night was very restless. He was at his desk at the postoffice department during the forenoon Wednesday, although feeling very badly, and did not return to the department after luncheon, remaining in his room. He became ill that night and has been confined to his bed ever since.

Dr. G. Lloyd Magruder, who was his physician during his severe illness of some months ago, has been attending him, and

Dr. Rixey, the surgeon-general of the navy, also has been called in. Dr. Magruder has given out a statement which admitted the serious nature of Mr. Payne's condition. His bulletin is: "The postmaster-general has not been feeling well for several days. Recently decided symptoms of heart trouble have developed. These were very serious during Wednesday night and the early part of Thursday. He is now resting in the room assigned him and is feeling better."

Mr. Payne's health has caused grave concern on a number of occasions since he came to Washington. Last spring he was confined to his room for weeks, and later took a prolonged sea trip for his health on the imperative instructions of his advisers. This trip appeared to benefit him considerably, and he returned to the department later expressing himself optimistically about his condition. Normally never strong, Mr. Payne has felt the heaviest during the summer months and during a part of the summer he spent only the forenoon at his office, remaining at home in the afternoon.

COACHMAN WINS HEAVY DAMAGES

D. D. Walker, St. Louis Wholesale Merchant, Must Pay Judgment in Maine.

David D. Walker, wholesale dry goods merchant and director of the Mercantile Trust Co., must pay his former coachman, Charles Stevens, $2500 as the result of a jury verdict in a suit by the latter against the former, returned in the supreme court at Alfred, Me., as told in dispatches to the Post-Dispatch.

The jury rendered a $2000 judgment on the count of malicious prosecution and $500 on that of trespass or assault and battery.

At Mr. Walker's magnificent summer home at Kennebunk, Me., a year ago the millionaire was arrested on complaint of Coachman Stevens and lodged in jail, where he remained for 26 hours. The story of the case, as told in three trials, is that while Stevens was in front of the Walker barn hitching up several horses Mr. Walker approached and asked why his nets were not placed on the animals.

Stevens testified that after heated words he told Mr. Walker to hitch up his own horses. Mr. Walker, he said, then chased him and pelted him with stones and threw stones at him. He had Mr. Walker arrested, but a justice court acquitted him, and the case went to the supreme court.

Mr. Walker was on the stand an hour and a half in his own defense. He said that he struck out with his cane to defend himself. Louis H. Randall, formerly of St. Louis, and a former employee of Mr. Walker, testified that he saw the latter chase Stevens and pound him with his cane.

ANTI-FOREIGN SOCIETY GROWS.

Many Parts of China Infested With Organization Very Like Boxers.

PEKIN, Sept. 30.—Unrest is increasing among the natives in South China, North Honan and West Shantung districts of China. The new anti-foreign society, the T'aiyuan is spreading rapidly, even during the present harvesting of good crops.

The situation is much the same as in 1900, without the famine incentive. The South China mission, or Canadian Presbyterian Church, and the Mission of the American board are in the infected region.

The placards of the new society being circulated are identical with those once used by the Boxers, with the following addition: "If every member will distribute 30 copies we shall become as numerous as the Boxers. If the Chinese Government will, we shall be able to drive the foreigners out of the country."

The membership of the T'aiyuan includes clerical, subordinate customs officials, Buddhist priests and influential natives.

The foreign ministers have conference in the ability of the society to suppress the infection. That official is the same who suppressed the Boxers of Shantung in 1900. The situation is not critical at present.

AMERICAN PRISONERS OF WAR ARE HOME

Crew of Prize Ship Arabia Do Not Believe Vladivostok Fleet Ready for Battle.

ASTORIA, Ore., Sept. 30.—The Oriental liner Arabia of the Portland-Astoria line has arrived in Portland from far eastern ports. The Arabia was captured by the Russian Vladivostok squadron July 22, 100 miles north of Yokohama. The cruiser Gromobol brought the Arabia to a stop, and 300 or 400 men boarded her. The Arabia was taken to Vladivostok, where 6,000 sacks of flour were removed from her, 35,000 sacks being left on board. The Arabia also had on board 90 flat cars, which the Russians threw into the sea. They washed ashore along the beach, where they were rotting in the sun.

"We were at Vladivostok 28 days," said Capt. Bahle, "and there met the crews of several captured vessels. The Russian officers showed us every courtesy, and personally our relations with them could not have been more pleasant."

The Russia and Gromobol were at Vladivostok when the Arabia was there. I have heard that the Russians claimed both vessels had been repaired sufficiently to permit them to resume duty, but I do not believe the report. I counted 35 gaping holes in the Russia. All of them were near the water line and were received in battle with Admiral Kamimura's fleet off the Izu Islands, Aug. 14. The cruiser was literally shot full of holes, and I am confident repairs could not be made in several months. The Gromobol was also badly used up. I secured a photograph of the Russia, but it disappeared from my cabin at Yokohama.

The Russia, one of the vessels that captured the Arabia, was sunk. We left Vladivostok Aug. 30.

Capt. Hinton, who talked with many Russian officers at Vladivostok and all seemed cheerful. When the successive Japanese victories were referred to the Russians laughed, saying the Japanese could not ultimately win. At Yokohama the Japanese were celebrating the victory of Lianyang when the Arabia arrived.

Asthma and Hay Fever Cured.

The truly marvelous cures of Asthma, which are being effected by Dr. Schiffmann's Asthma Cure certainly call for notice.

Rev. G. L. Taylor, of Washburn, Ill., says: "Some 7 years ago my wife used several packages of your Asthma Cure which resulted in a permanent cure."

A Hay Fever sufferer writes: "I have been a sufferer from Hay Fever for over 20 years, and it seemed harder every year. The first night I used your Asthma Cure I was greatly relieved. I cured my cough after using a few times. I shall recommend it to all sufferers of Hay Fever." Mrs. Martha Simerson, Leaningburg, Mich. Sold by all druggists at 50c and $1.00. LACK OF DRESS NO BAR TO ELOPEMENT

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 30.—Miss Nora Boswick, the 17-year-old daughter of a farmer of Henderson County, Kentucky, left her father's house at 3 o'clock yesterday morning and walked to Shuffletown in her bare feet with Edward Pemberton, a neighbor's boy. Her father had forbidden her to receive the attentions of William T. Highland, a young man of this city, and suspecting that she would elope with him had taken her clothing from her.

Miss Boswick lowered herself with a rope from the window of her room on the second floor, and when she and Young Pemberton reached Shuffletown they secured a skiff and rowed to the Indiana side, landing at Rockport, where Highland was waiting with a horse and buggy. A merchant was induced to open his store, and the young woman was provided with clothing and came here, where a marriage license was secured and in a few minutes they were made one by Justice of the Peace Schneider.

FIVE BROTHERS FROM FIVE STATES SEE WORLD'S FAIR AS STUDENTS

Compact of More Than a Year Ago Is Carried Out by Members of Austin Family, Distributed Over a Wide Expanse of Country.

Left to right—William T. Austin of Corinth, Miss., Robert R. Austin of St. Louis, J. Dee Austin of East St. Louis, Ill., Lester C. Austin of Miles, Tex., and J. Lee Austin of Henderson, Tenn.

Five brothers who reside in five different states are attending the World's Fair as the result of a compact made over a year ago, fate having spared them to carry it out.

They are Lester C., William T., Robert R., J. Lee and J. Dee Austin of Missouri, Illinois, Texas, Mississippi and Tennessee. The compact was made when Lester C. and J. Lee graduated from college last June. All the brothers and their father, C. W. Austin of Scott's Hill, Tenn., were present at the commencement exercises and resolved to attend the greatest exposition in the world as a post-graduate course.

Having made this plan, Robert R. was sent ahead, like Gideon, to spy out the land and make preparations for the coming of the others. Although a stranger in St. Louis, his family was well known, and he soon found a position.

Later he was able to get his brother, W. T. Austin, a position as traveling salesman in Mississippi that he, too, might be sure to attend the Fair.

Then a position for the summer was obtained for J. Dee Austin in East St. Louis, while Lester C. Austin, who was a music teacher at Miles, Tex., J. Dee Austin and the father, C. W. Austin, were within a half day's journey of each other in Tennessee. Thus the gathering together of the family was made easy and all were able to meet at the appointed time. They will remain two weeks, spending as much time as possible studying World's Fair exhibits.

The Hawes men have intimated all along that the Third ward politician would employ Indians, but this Miles indignantly denies.

As an instance of the docility of his followers, Miles cited the fact that 200 of them visited the residence of Circuit Attorney Joseph W. Folk last night. Mr. Folk was not at home. There was considerable pounding on the front and back doors before the Milesites could be convinced that the nominee was not in.

After leaving Mr. Folk's house, the parade wound its way down Delmar boulevard and upon reaching Mr. Hawes' residence, No. 381, the band began to play a solemn funeral march. The Milesites were taken to a North St. Louis "cafe" and treated to refreshments.

SUICIDE COMPACT IN PROMISE TO WED

Bride of Few Hours Saved From Death by Husband Who Wanted to Live.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 30.—Seeking to carry out a suicide compact between herself and her husband, Mrs. W. L. George, a bride of a few hours, took morphine here late last night.

The husband, regretting his part in the peculiar wedding contract, informed the police of his wife's intentions. She took the poison after she had been arrested.

George and Miss Estella Mott, eloped from Kansas City Wednesday and were married here by a justice of the peace. They had agreed before leaving Kansas City that they would end their lives immediately after the ceremony and give their bodies to a medical college.

The bridegroom viewed life too happily to carry out his part of the agreement. He persuaded his wife to go to Lake Country with him, suggesting that she would drown herself. Then he urged that death by poison would be preferable and took her to the Transit House.

While at the hotel he informed the police and both were taken in charge. The bride had in her possession five kinds of poison and while the officers were searching her, managed to take a large quantity of morphine.

She was a stenographer in Kansas City and George, whose right name is J. L. Louvre, has been a regular army soldier. Mrs. George made a previous attempt to take her life.

COUNTY "COPS" ARREST WRONG MAN: APOLOGY

No One Is Present in Court to Prosecute Manager of A. G. Spalding Athletic Goods Store When He Appears at Clayton.

"CONFIDENCE MAN," THEY SAID; VAGRANCY CHARGED

Innocent Man Is Beaten and Thrown Into Jail After Attempting to Assist Stranger in Finding His Way to the City.

The case of R. G. Campbell of 1116 Allan street, manager of the A. G. Spalding athletic goods store at 208 Pine street, who was arrested in St. Louis County Saturday and thrown in the Clayton jail on the charge of being a confidence man, was not pressed when called before Justice Campbell of Hadamont Saturday morning.

No witness appeared to complain against Campbell and Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Gardner of St. Louis County dismissed the case and told Mr. Campbell that the officers had been mistaking in arresting him.

Campbell was arrested by St. Louis County officials after a fight near the county line on Delmar avenue and who said he was the "sure thing" confidence man. Campbell was taken to the Clayton jail, and late Saturday night gave bond for his release.

None of the officers who participated in his arrest appeared to prosecute Campbell. Campbell was indignant at the treatment accorded him by the officials. He says they knew at the time they were arresting an innocent man.

While waiting for an Olive street car in front of 800 Delmar boulevard, Campbell says he was approached by a man and asked which car to take to St. Louis. The man was staggering, and to help him to his home Campbell told him, he said, that he was going to town and that he could take the same car.

In a few minutes, Campbell says, five St. Louis County officials were upon him, accusing him of drugging the man and of attempting to entice him into a dice game.

They started to arrest him and Campbell broke into a run toward the St. Louis city line. The officers followed, overtook and beat him and took him to Clayton. Campbell has a black eye and several bruises on his face, which he says the officers inflicted.

Vagrancy was the charge to which Campbell answered in the St. Louis County justice court Saturday morning. Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Gardner apologized for the arrest and the incident was closed.

THEFT FOR CHILD SENDS HER TO JAIL

Woman Who Was Disappointed in Love and Sold Mortgaged Furniture Is Sentenced.

"I am guilty. I sold the furniture. But I did it to get money to buy food for my baby."

Mrs. Victoria O'Neill of 7212 North Broadway, who sold mortgaged furniture because she and her baby were starving, made answer to the charge against her in the Court of Criminal Correction Friday in these words.

Judge Hiram Moore was touched by her story of the reasons for her transgressions, and he would have been glad if he could have turned her free, but the law had been violated and punishment had to follow. He gave her the minimum sentence, however, three months in jail, instead of sending her to the penitentiary, as he might have done.

KENTUCKY DEMOCRATS ANGRY

Acting Gov. Thorne's Name Stricken From Speaking Lists Because He Pardoned Alleged Murderer.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 30.—Lieutenant-Governor W. P. Thorne, who pardoned Herman Bucher, a convicted murderer, who had served but two years of a life sentence, has aroused great indignation in the Democratic party by his action and today his name was stricken by the party managers from all the speaking lists. The acting governor's action, it is feared, may cost the party many votes.

THIEF STEALS COSTLY WINES

Lawyers at Festival Hall Luncheon Come Near Going Thirsty as a Result.

Lawyers and jurists attending the Universal Congress at the World's Fair came near having no wine for luncheon at Festival Hall Friday. During the night 10 cases of valuable wines were stolen from the basement of Festival Hall. It was left there Thursday afternoon for Friday's luncheon. When the caterer and waiters were getting ready to serve it at noon they discovered that not a bottle had been left.

Judge Warren Hough and Judge Leo Ransier started an investigation. They found that a delivery wagon had backed up to Festival Hall Thursday evening and a man had been seen carrying a case out. It was supposed that he had business there and nothing was said to him.

After the loss was discovered there was much hurrying and a new supply of wine was obtained in time to avert a dry luncheon.

The wine stolen was worth between $50 and $100.

"SOCKER" LEAGUE IS REORGANIZED

Promoters of Popular Winter Sport Have Planned New Agreement For Local League.

Followers and players of the association football game in St. Louis held a meeting last night in the Woman's Magazine building and organized the Association Football League of St. Louis and completed arrangements were made for the playing of the "soccer" game during the coming winter.

On account of the unpleasant ending of the games last year it has been the desire of those having the interests of the game at heart to reorganize upon a new basis this year and conduct the games in a clean and healthy manner.

At last night's meeting, the following officers were unanimously elected: Geo. L. Moselle, president; Thos. W. Barker, vice-president; Thos. W. Barker, secretary, and Peter R. Gunn, A. contract was closed with the management of Kulake Park, where all games will be played, and Paul McSweeney, the pointed umpire for the season.

There is a marked difference in the arrangements for the coming season and those that prevailed last year. The officers of the league are men who are prominent in business life and who were only persuaded to accept the positions upon the promises of the managers and players that the games should be conducted in the cleanest and most sportmanlike manner.

As an evidence of good faith on the part of the managers and captains, a compact was made giving Referee McSweeney absolute power over the players on the field and any show of fighting or rovidism on the part of any player will bring about suspension for the remainder of the season.

Four teams are entered in the new league race, made up for the most part by the old players, though the names of the clubs are entirely new. It will be noticed that no team bears the name of any of the local sporting goods houses. The teams will play under the title of the St. Arns, the Woman's Magazine, the Thistles and the Jefferson Club team.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Two attractive Brooklyn girls, sisters, are being searched for by detectives and by the sweetheart of one of them, who is greatly distressed at their disappearance. The girls are Mamie Corbett, 17 years old, and Annie, 15 years old, and they lived with their mother and stepfather at 212 Monticor street.

On Sunday morning early they were busily spanked because they remained out late at a picnic. They went to St. Anthony's Church in the morning, as if nothing had happened to offend their dignity. Several of their friends saw them praying in the church, but the girls have not been seen by their relatives since.

UNCLE SAM IS BOYS' GUARDIAN

Two Alleged Offenders Against the Federal Laws Will Appear in United States Court.

Frank Dorado, proprietor of a fruit stand at Sixth and Walnut streets, is in a fair way to learn that the United States government holds special delivery messengers about with protection which ordinary boys do not enjoy.

Dorado attacked a special delivery messenger and now he has the United States government to reckon with.

Arthur Ziern is the messenger in question. He asked Dorado for some grapes and it is charged that Dorado knocked him down and kicked him. On Friday United States Commissioner B. F. Habbitt, at the instance of Assistant District Attorney Horace Poyer, issued a warrant against Dorado charging him with assaulting a letter carrier in uniform in the discharge of his duty. Dorado has been arrested.

Louis A. Innerarity, alias Comstock, is another man who has unwittingly brought the wrath of the United States upon him. He is charged with having committed on government property.

Willie Deek, 14 years old, a messenger employed by the Transatlantic Commerce line, is his accuser. Willie was sent to the postoffice with a $5 bill to buy a dollar's worth of stamps. He saw Innerarity saw him get the $5 change and took the money away from him.

Commissioner Habbitt issued a warrant against Innerarity Friday.

THE LIFE STRIKE

The Workings of the Human Body Crippled.

DEATH TO MILLIONS.

Kidney Disease is Sapping the Vigor of American Manhood and Womanhood—Warner's Safe Cure the Only Certain Kidney Cure.

The kidneys are by all odds the most important organs of the human body. They virtually control all the other organs. Should they stop working for even a few hours the blood would become so thick and clogged with uric acid and other deadly waste matter that the most powerful heart would break down in the effort to force it through the veins.

The strongest lungs would collapse trying to purify such poisonous blood.

Without pure, rich, red blood there can be no health—no life.

It is true some of us live for months with sick kidneys, but it is just waiting for them to get a little worse—they never cure themselves.

Death is constantly hanging over us. It comes instantly to thousands, with warning to many.

Backache, headache, rheumatism, sleeplessness, indigestion, etc., are certain signs of affected kidneys.

Health, though, we can never know while the kidneys are out of order.

There is but one medicine that's fit to use for the kidneys—only one remedy that will positively purify, strengthen and cure the kidneys without injury to the delicate tissues. It is Warner's Safe Cure, discovered over thirty years ago and used ever since by doctors in their families and practices, and in hospitals throughout the world.

It cures when everything else fails, when you have given up hope and expect death. The change for the better will come with the first few doses.

SENATOR HOAR DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

End Came at His Historic Home in Worcester at 5:35 O'Clock This Morning—Death Was Painless Just As He Had Wished.

HE HAD SERVED IN U. S. SENATE TWENTY-EIGHT YEARS

It Was His Boast That He Had Never Once Sought Public Office and That He Never Voted Against His Conscience.

"When you raise the flag over the Philippine Islands as an emblem of dominion and acquisition, you take it down from Independence Hall."

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 30.—George Frisbie Hoar, senior United States senator for Massachusetts, died at 5:35 o'clock this morning, after a long illness of lunacy and the infirmities of old age. The end came without pain, just as the patient had hoped.

The funeral will be held Monday from the Church of the Unity and Rev. Edward Everett Hale, chaplain of the United States Senate, will officiate.

He was 78 years old and had been in the national Congress since 1868. In that year he was elected to the House of Representatives, serving continuously in that body until 1876, when he was elected to the Senate.

There were present at the bedside when death came the senator's son, Gen. Rockwood Hoar, his daughter, Mary Hoar, and Dr. Warren R. Gilman, who for weeks has been in almost constant attendance upon the senator.

Intelligence of Senator Hoar's demise was first communicated by telephone from the residence to the press by Dr. Gilman. Immediately after a prearranged signal was transmitted on the fire alarm system and the long-dreaded tidings were conveyed to the people of the city by the tolling of the church bells.

Senator Hoar had been in ill health since last winter and his condition became critical over a month ago.

In August his illness became critical, and after several weeks his death had been a daily probability.

After more than half a century in politics he could write proudly in his "Autobiography of Seventy Years," published last year:

"I have never lifted my finger or spoken a word to any man to secure or promote my own election to any office. I do not mean to criticize any man who has done their honorable ambition for public service or exert themselves for office, for which they think themselves fit."

But if these same visitors had known the venerable statesman, who generally disdained to be in his physical appearance, read genuine yellowback novels and 10-cent productions on the same order with all the avidity of a messenger boy, or a giddy factory girl, perhaps they would have gazed longer and with increased curiosity and wonderment. For truth to tell, Massachusetts' senior senator had this mental pastime and refused to be separated from it.

Mr. Hoar's favorite time for reading these hair-raising productions was while traveling. Whenever he had a railway journey of any length to make he carried with him a pile of literature of the "Dead-wood Dick," "Red-Headed Ralph," "The Ranger of the Roaring Rialto" type. He read the stuff through from first to last—never skipping a word—and got the keenest enjoyment out of the plots and impossibilities. And he liked nothing better than to discuss with his companions the curious workings of the human mind that could evolve such situations.

HOW HE AMUSED FRIENDS.

But this was not Mr. Hoar's only trait that amused his legislative peers. When he was feeling in particularly good humor he kept his neighbors in the Senate in a constant tit of amusement by his sotto voce comments on the proceedings.

His colleagues had a unique way of gauging his humor. It was by the manner in which he manipulated a bunch of keys that dangled from his fingers. When he was at peace with the world and everything was going smoothly with him, Mr. Hoar swung this bunch of keys with an easy, regular motion. If the evening should stop, or become irregular, then there was a little tremor brewing in his mind. If he should tap his desk with the keys, then it was known that the views expressed by some one on the floor were not to his liking.

When he drew the keys up near his face and swung them in a circular motion, he was amused at the verbal antics of some of his opponents. But when he swept the bunch through the air in long curves his colleagues knew he was disgusted and about to take the floor to reply to some displeasing argument, or to reproach the Senate for some proceeding not in accord with his ideas of propriety.

Unlike most of his colleagues in the Senate Mr. Hoar fancied no particular sport, and this, too, caused not a little good nature.

First have never in my life cast a vote or done an act in legislation that I did not at the time believe to be right, and that I am now willing to avow and defend and debate with any champion of fact at any time and in any presence.

Second—Whether I am right or wrong in my opinion to the duty of acting with and adherence to party, it is the result not of emotion or attachment or excitement, but of a cool calculation, sober and deliberate reflection as I am able to do. Many of the things I have done in this world which have been approved by other men, or have tended to give me any place in the respect of my countrymen, have been done in opposition, at the time, to the party to which I belonged. But I have made that opposition without leaving the party. In every sense of the word I have been a party man.

GEORGE FRISBIE HOAR.

GOOD STORIES OF THE LATE SENATOR HOAR

Special to the Post-Dispatch. WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—George Frisbie Hoar was probably the best-known member of the United States Senate, and certainly was the object of more interest among visitors than any of his colleagues.

Any day in the gallery could be seen groups of two and three with heads together having Senator Hoar pointed out to them, gazing at him long and curiously, and discussing him in whispers or undertones. They seemed to come just to see Mr. Hoar, and when they had taken him in to their hearts' content, they stole away.

But if these same visitors had known the venerable statesman, who generally disdained to be in his physical appearance, read genuine yellowback novels and 10-cent productions on the same order with all the avidity of a messenger boy, or a giddy factory girl, perhaps they would have gazed longer and with increased curiosity and wonderment. For truth to tell, Massachusetts' senior senator had this mental pastime and refused to be separated from it.

Mr. Hoar's favorite time for reading these hair-raising productions was while traveling. Whenever he had a railway journey of any length to make he carried with him a pile of literature of the "Dead-wood Dick," "Red-Headed Ralph," "The Ranger of the Roaring Rialto" type. He read the stuff through from first to last—never skipping a word—and got the keenest enjoyment out of the plots and impossibilities. And he liked nothing better than to discuss with his companions the curious workings of the human mind that could evolve such situations.

HOW HE AMUSED FRIENDS.

But this was not Mr. Hoar's only trait that amused his legislative peers. When he was feeling in particularly good humor he kept his neighbors in the Senate in a constant tit of amusement by his sotto voce comments on the proceedings.

His colleagues had a unique way of gauging his humor. It was by the manner in which he manipulated a bunch of keys that dangled from his fingers. When he was at peace with the world and everything was going smoothly with him, Mr. Hoar swung this bunch of keys with an easy, regular motion. If the evening should stop, or become irregular, then there was a little tremor brewing in his mind. If he should tap his desk with the keys, then it was known that the views expressed by some one on the floor were not to his liking.

When he drew the keys up near his face and swung them in a circular motion, he was amused at the verbal antics of some of his opponents. But when he swept the bunch through the air in long curves his colleagues knew he was disgusted and about to take the floor to reply to some displeasing argument, or to reproach the Senate for some proceeding not in accord with his ideas of propriety.

Unlike most of his colleagues in the Senate Mr. Hoar fancied no particular sport, and this, too, caused not a little good nature.

TYPICAL HOAR HUMOR.

Mr. Hoar was regarded by all his colleagues as an authority on history, language, literature and law. Disputed points on any of these subjects were usually referred to him. His decisions were rendered at once and regarded as final.

In the last few months of the services of William V. Allen, the Fenianist senator from Nebraska, an amusing controversy arose between him and Senator Tilden of South Carolina over the pronunciation of the word "status." Allen had given the short sound of "i" in his pronunciation, and Tilden jumped to his feet and insisted that it should be the long sound. He appealed to Senator Hoar as an authority on pronunciation. The senator diplomatically said that Mr. Allen undoubtedly knew that the word should be pronounced with the long sound of "i," but had probably used the short sound in order to save the time of the Senate. As Allen was the champion long-distance talker and at the time had held the floor of the Senate for 14 consecutive hours, the subtle satire of Mr. Hoar was duly appreciated.

Outside the Senate chamber Mr. Hoar's humor was as catching and as spontaneous as in it.

"Senator, I want one of your pictures for publication next Sunday," said a newspaper correspondent to Mr. Hoar a short time ago.

"Certainly," he responded. "Garland, go and get it for me." Answering the look of astonishment on the correspondent's face, the senator said: "I have a picture of myself in my pocket for my pictures, as he is a much better looking man than I am. When anybody wants my picture, I refer to the picture of Mr. Hoar, who is a much better looking man than I am. When anybody wants my picture, I refer to the picture of Mr. Hoar, who is a much better looking man than I am. When anybody wants my picture, I refer to the picture of Mr. Hoar, who is a much better looking man than I am."

As an after-dinner orator Senator Hoar had a wide reputation, but in the evening of life he seldom accepted an invitation to a formal dinner. He preferred the quiet of his home, where he was surrounded by a few old friends at his own table. He was a habit of lecturing the Senate on the subject of the decline of the nation in sending his regrets that he would be unable to attend.

able to attend a dinner of the Gridiron Club. The reason he assigned was this: "I know I would be called upon for an address. Now, I always make an address in Greek and, as I understand your club speaks and understands nothing in Greek, I would be out of place at the dinner."

In his personal character Senator Hoar was entirely different from the contentious disputant on the floor of the Senate. He was a man of warm heart and loyal friendship. He liked and disliked in superlative. A man was altogether good or altogether bad. If he was a friend to anyone, he would go any length to serve that person and do so in the most unostentatious way.

With the law and politics as his chosen professions, Senator Hoar had achieved a high place and reputation in both, but his greatest delight and some of his most lasting work lay in the field of literature, historical research and antiquarianism. The happiest moments of his life were spent in his library at his home in Worcester, Mass., which was followed in his mind as the place of residence of many men who figured prominently in the early history of America. He had built adjoining his cozy home and property a treasure of some 800 volumes of the most carefully selected books that his training and taste could suggest. In it are rare volumes and almost priceless manuscripts which represent a lifetime of correspondence and research in his accumulation.

AMERICAN HORSES SOLD BEST

Surprise in Prices at Sale of Foxhall P. Keene's Stable of Imported and Domestic Hunters.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The entire hunting establishment of Foxhall P. Keene has been sold here at public auction. The consignment consisted of nineteen qualified hunters, including thoroughbreds bred by James R. Keene at Castleton stud, Kentucky, and Irish hunters which the younger Mr. Keene collected and brought to this country two years ago.

In addition to these, two packs of hounds, bought in England, were sold. The sale brought representatives not only from all the hunting colonies of this country, but from England and Ireland as well. While all the hunters offered brought high prices generally, the American-bred horse commanded a higher figure in almost every instance than his English or Irish contemporary. Five-year-old brown gelding Prospect, by Hirescope-Royal Nun, was sold to the agent of Capt. Mathers of the Royal Leicestershire regiment, Birr, Ireland, for $2000.

The famous mare Becky Sharp was bought by Roger Winters for the same figure. The hounds were sold to James Hyde for $1500.

The highest price paid for an Irish hunter was $1000.

WANTS $750,000 TO CARRY NEW YORK

Odell Makes Cortelyou Gasped by Big Demand on His Treasure Chest.

BUT GOVERNOR IS INSISTENT

Declares He Must Have That Amount or State Will Be Lost to Roosevelt.

SPECIAL TO THE POST-DISPATCH.
NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Gov. Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., in his capacity as chairman of the New York State Republican committee, has demanded $750,000 of Chairman George B. Cortelyou of the Republican national committee.

Gov. Odell accompanied his demand with the statement that this amount of money, together with such sums as he will be able to raise himself, is absolutely essential if New York is to be carried by Roosevelt and Higgins.

Chairman Cortelyou was amazed at the demand. His hurried trip to Washington was to lay the matter before the President.

Cortelyou is inclined to be stingy with the money he has in his campaign chest. Where Hanna would spend $100 he hesitates about spending $25. When Odell came at him with his demand for three-quarters of a million he suggested that $500,000 is a large sum, thinking to save $250,000 if possible. Odell was insistent, and Cortelyou rushed away to ask the President about it.

How Governor Went About It.

Odell put the matter up to Cortelyou in this manner: He said there is a fair chance for Roosevelt to carry the state, but that the situation for the state ticket is precarious. He said he will get all the money he can, but intimated that contributions are slow and then said, bluntly, that Cortelyou must come to the rescue or there is no telling what may happen to Roosevelt in view of the slump that may come to the Higgins end of the ticket.

Cortelyou has expected all along that he would be obliged to put money into the New York campaign. Soon after the Chicago convention he asked the President to notify Odell that the President and the national committee would hold Odell responsible for New York state. This was merely a bluff move on Cortelyou's part to keep Odell's demands down to a minimum. As soon as Odell nominated his state ticket and discovered the kind of campaign the Democrats intend to make and are making, he went at Cortelyou with his tremendous demand.

Cortelyou tried to plead poverty. Odell refused to listen to the plea. He had made inquiries and had discovered that the national committee is getting relatively more money than it did either four or eight years ago. By "relatively" is meant that in proportion to the number of states in which the Republicans expect to make active campaigns the contributions are large. For Hanna made campaigns in many more states than Cortelyou will enter. As a matter of fact National Treasurer Elias has plenty of money, although he may not have it if he honors the Odell draft for $750,000.

Say Cortelyou Is Too Stingy.

Politicians from other states, who have been treated liberally in the past, are coming in in numbers and complaining bitterly that Cortelyou is stingy. Some of them say that he even cuts down from 25 to 50 per cent on their orders for documents and lithographs.

Cortelyou is absolute in the committee. He is a Republican every inch of him. He is not a politician. He is a man of letters and should not, and he never lets sentiment dictate in anything, even in the distribution of lithographs and buttons. He rarely lets himself be moved. He rarely demands more than he can get. He rarely lets himself be moved. He rarely demands more than he can get. He rarely lets himself be moved. He rarely demands more than he can get.

THE LARGEST RETAIL SHOE BUSINESS IN THE WORLD

Supremacy!

At last we can announce to the public that Regal Shoes are made in QUARTER SIZES.

Never before has such an achievement been accomplished in shoe manufacture. There are now 288 different fittings in each of the 75 new Regal styles—36 quarter sizes in 8 widths. No other manufacturer can offer you more than half as many. If his even size is too small and his next half size too large, you are helpless. You must either wear shoes that don't fit, or buy made-to-order shoes at extravagant prices.

The exclusive Regal quarter-size system brings the fittings of shoes down to such minute gradations that no custom bootmaker in the land can build a shoe about your foot with more glove-like smoothness.

Regal quarter sizes mark the end of custom bootmaking—for where now does the highest priced custom shoe surpass a Regal?

Not in style, because Regal styles are designed by the same master shoemakers who set the shoe styles for the world.

Not in material and wear, as proven by the most stringent tests devised. And now, not even in fit. With this, the final requisite achieved, Regals stand supreme.

When you consider that the Regal price is still $3.50, one-third the cost of a custom shoe which is not a bit better, you will appreciate the magnitude of this accomplishment.

75 Handsome Styles for Fall are now ready in each of the 8 Regal Stores. Never before has such an exquisite line of footwear been offered by any one dealer or manufacturer. Even if you're only "looking around," we urge your early inspection.

ROSES WILL SOON SELL BY BUSHEL

Blossoms Will No Longer Beguile
Womanhood When Their Cheapness Becomes Known.

COLD STORAGE BEING USED

If Present Prices Last, Everybody
Will Wear Flowers to V.
P. Ball.

Now can Clara look with scorn upon stagnant Algernon if he sends her less than ten dozen roses to wear to the theater, and the gift of fifteen bunches of violets
will be just cause for wrath and a severance of plighted troths.

"Ten dozen roses, forsooth. A miserable dollar's worth of flowers," she may say if she reads the prices current in the blossom marts. "Has your love, sirrah, utterly gone out, or do you wish me to think that I am a maiden-of little worth,
that you send me such niggardly gifts?
Last January you showered white lilacs
at a dollar a blossom upon me, now you insult me with roses worth a dime a dozen."

Such is the state of affairs that exists
one week from the advent of the Veiled Prophet, a time when all flowers are usually higher than the edelweiss that grows only on the summit of the Alps. Blossoms that under ordinary circumstances could have been kept back for a week have burst into full flower and must be disposed of at any price.

Florists are in despair at the lack of buyers in their line of trade and many have expressed the wish that they could grow only artificial flowers for millinery, which blossoms can be controlled even during a spell of unprecedented hot weather.
How to take advantage of this unexpected boom of cheap flowers is a question that is taxing the genius for economy of the St. Louis youth. Is it a legitimate use of the club's lexicon to amass in choice roses culled at the bottom of the market under the guise of imported wine? Connoisseurs that would not stick at buying cheap wheat for a rise and doubting over this temptation of cheap flowers, but it is safe to say that thousands of blossoms
will be placed in cold storage this week to be brought forth on Veiled Prophet's night.

One detail of this safe depositing of flowers is troubling the young men.
Will the rose, the carnation or the violet
be the most expensive flower Oct.
4? The more canny are answering this question by cutting the choicest blossoms of each flower, so that they may be prepared for any unexpected flop of the market.

Years have passed since such a cheap opportunity was given the again to pose as a millionaire, and as cold storage is a recent invention, it is safe to say that never before have the materials for such a confidence game been furnished.

Those who are deepest in the confidence of the florists say that a counterplot is not only possible, but imminent. "There are other flowers that may bloom before Tuesday, and it is said that a well-known grower of blossoms has offered to present a seedling sack to any of our leader who will make the wearing of "rab cactus" or "century plant" blossoms obligatory upon the ultra-fashionable.

This is denounced as an outrage by those who have engaged storage room in refrigerating plants, and sharp re-taliations is planned. If such a scheme is carried out, florists who have no cacti or century plants in bloom are also worth over the attempt to shut out their wares from being worn at the ball.

One advantage that may result from the present surplus in the flower market will be exact information on the conditions under which blossoms may be stored from the cheap to the dear season. No chance for flower preservation on the large scale has been obtained except by stewards of Atlantic steamship lines, where fresh flowers are a daily occurrence, even on the "ten-day liners."

If the experiments prove a success, flower storage warehouses will be erected, and blossoms as well as chickens and game will be always in the market.

The Sign of the Horse Shoe.
The old superstition of the horse shoe and the alleged "good luck" attached to it is still adhered to by the present generation. This "good luck" seems to go hand in hand with the purchases of "home outfits" bought from Lowenstein & Co., the popular home furnishings at 107 Olive street.

Happiness has been the good fortune of all young married couples who allowed this firm to fit up their new home. The horse shoe is the sign of low prices, good goods and easy terms, in addition to the "good luck" it brings the customers.
Lowenstein & Co. pay low store rental and have "no clerk hire." They pay spot cash for their purchases when buying goods, which means big discounts. They have the wants and needs of the workman at heart and they cater to his every comfort. The proprietors wait on each customer personally, thus assuring no misrepresentation of goods and the best prices and terms.

It will pay you to call on Lowenstein &
Co. and look through their handsome line
of furniture, carpets, etc., before buying.
Pretty souvenirs to all callers. Look for the sign of the horse shoe on Olive street, north side of street, No. 107.

Aged Nebraska Doctor Accompanies Young Patient to St. Louis and They Are Wedded.

Dr. Isaiah Bennett, 72 years old, and Miss Grace S. Pearson, 20 years old, both of Wilsonville, Neb., were married Thursday afternoon at Clayton by Justice of the Peace F. L. Stoble.
The romance began nearly a year ago when Miss Pearson became sick. Dr. Bennett was called to attend her and after she was well his visits continued. A trip to the World's Fair was decided on. Both deny that they eloped, and say their friends in Nebraska were informed of their intentions to wed when they reached this city. They will remain in St. Louis several days and will then return to Wilsonville.

ONCE ROOSEVELT LOST SMILE

Crowd Gathered in Front of Dental Office and Saw President's Molar Filled.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—President
Roosevelt visited a dentist's office in New York avenue, near Fourteenth street, to have a troublesome molar filled. He was driven to the dentist in an open carriage.
The presence of the President and his carriage attracted a crowd, but when the President seated himself in a chair and the dentist began to work, in full view of the passersby, the crowd grew to large proportions. Mr. Roosevelt did not appear to be annoyed by the presence of so many people. His characteristic smile disappeared while the dentist was at work, but he stood the ordeal well, according to the curious ones.
As he left the dentist's office, the President lifted his hat in response to the greeting of the crowd which had enjoyed the novelty of seeing a President having his teeth filled.

The appointment of two new vice-pres-

sition of general manager, made vacant
by the resignation of Russell Harding.

eral operations and affairs, and Alexander

PHONE MESSAGE CHECKS BURGLARY

Calling Up Home, East Side Deputy Sheriff Learns of Presence of Would-Be Robbers.

RUNS HALF MILE TO THE HOUSE

Burglars, Frightened Away, Come Back, and Are Target for Bullets.

"Hello! Is that you?"
"Yes."
"This is me. Is everything all right?"
"No. A burglar is trying to get into the house."
This is the sort of conversation that took place when E. C. Harris, a deputy sheriff living at Lansdowne, a suburb of East St. Louis, called up his home at 2 o'clock Friday morning to find out if all was well. He was lucky enough to call up at the psychological moment and was enabled to prevent his home being burglarized and his family terrorized.

Harris' duty is to patrol Lansdowne. On account of frequent burglaries in that section lately, he has made it a practice to call up his own home at intervals during the night to find out if everything was all right and reassure his wife.

He called up at 2 o'clock Friday morning from Lansdowne Park. The first of the telephone bell was never so welcome to his wife as it was then. She had just been awakened by footfalls about the house and noise at a window. She told her husband about it and he started on a run for his home, half a mile away.

When he drew near he saw three men trying to get through a window. He heard them coming and ran. He hunted through the neighborhood for them, but they doubled back on him and, supposing that the man they had heard approaching was simply a passer-by, they made another attempt to break into the house.

William Whitsett, who lives near Harris' home, saw them. They ran away and did not return again.

Complete reports of the police show that three residences were entered by burglars Wednesday night. They were the homes of William Pope, where Mrs. H. Elliott, Charles Grant, Frank Turner and Joseph Gill at the Gill residence, they obtained a watch and some money. Mrs. Gill saw one of them, a negro, and has given a good description of him.

Second Similar Accident Prevents Prosecution of Damage Suit.

James Distler was to have appeared in the St. Clair County circuit court next Monday to prosecute a suit against the O'Fallon Coal & Mining Co. for $200 damages for injuries received by his son while at work in the O'Fallon mine. He was not able to do so on account of having met with a similar accident as befell his son.

Distler, Sr., was at work in the mine at O'Fallon Thursday when he was caught under a fall of coal and slate and badly injured. Both his legs were crushed and he was injured internally.

PLAIN TALK

Food for Thought There, Too.

"Having found out for myself the food that enables me to get the most pleasure out of life I consider it my duty to tell someone else my experience," says a Mass. woman.

"Born with a weak and sensitive stomach I suffered long with indigestion and the many ills arising from it, general debility, weakness of the bowels, constipation, with catarrhal inflammation and rheumatism of every form and fashion with a tremendous amount of suffering. I had what is known as deposits of brick dust and uric acid, with almost every other impurity of the blood which such a condition can produce.

"Coming to the conclusion that I must eat to live and not live to eat I began looking about to find the best way and among the many foods tested was Grape-Nuts. I did not use it as a general food or exclusively but simply ate it once a day, either at morning or night on an empty stomach and softened in warm cream or milk with a little sugar, bread or butter or cooked or raw fruit. Up to this time I had tried every known remedy for constipation and had to rely on the medicines, although I continually got worse instead of better; within a short time the Grape-Nuts (which always digested) had toned up my whole system and digestive organs in particular until every bit of constipation and bowel trouble disappeared and I had good-bye to all the catarrhs.

"Now after using Grape-Nuts two years I still think it delicious. My rheumatism is all gone, also the constipation, something I had never even hoped for, never have had a headache nowadays, my eyesight and hearing are excellent for one of my age, but had given me much trouble while I suffered from constipation. I am now past 60 years of age but walk out and enjoy it. Feel strong and well and I know the Grape-Nuts has given added vigor to my brain, too. It would be very gratifying to me to know that my letter had helped show others the way to a proper diet that has cured my stomach and bowel trouble." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Look in each pkg. for the famous "little book," "The Road to Well-being."

Letters to the Sunday Editor

THERE'S no use trying to deny the fact—the comments of readers of the Sunday Post-Dispatch on the merits of its successive features are of the greatest help in telling us just what sort of stories the public likes best. And when we know this important fact of popular preference, why, it's a pleasure to meet the wishes of readers and continue to interest them with the brightest features along the lines indicated.

For instance, many subscribers were so delighted with the color-page illustration and story of "A St. Louis Portrait" that they expressed themselves to this effect, praising the Sunday Post-Dispatch for effective use of all local opportunities in the way of pictures and stories. "You don't generalize vaguely or depend upon historical anniversaries for your features," says one. "It seems possible to you to find real, vital, new material, right here in St. Louis and of the present moment. And that's what I like—fresh, new, up-to-date stories and pictures of local value."

And this is why is offered in next Sunday's Post-Dispatch one of the most striking color pages yet presented. There's an extraordinary boy painter now in St. Louis who has drawn an extraordinary picture. He is of international fame, his work hangs in the Paris Salon as well as in the Liberal Arts building here and it commands high prices. Well, this marvelous boy has made the front color page for next Sunday's Post-Dispatch and it is a masterpiece of work. It bears dramatically upon the Russo-Japanese war and makes a wonderfully forceful use of an exceptional opportunity to emphasize a strange truth of the situation in the Far East.

Then, too, many readers are delighted with the excellent World's Fair stories and in our Sunday magazine. "Not routine developments—romances, life-dramas, stories full of heart-interest, life-actually happening at the World's Fair. It shows how intensely human is to read about, not merely a dry catalogue of exhibits and list of stereotyped features."

Again, therefore, in next Sunday's Post-Dispatch will be three exceptionally interesting romance, love-tales in which a certain booth at the Fair figures in which a ular matrimonial bureau, a shrine for no less than six pretty girls have been married. It's a clear case of Cupid's handiwork—Cupid is actually on the spot and is charged with full responsibility.

The second of these Fair stories is one that will excite world-wide interest. A certain personage has been severely criticized in this country and Europe for the manner in which he has been connected with the World's Fair. He replied to these criticisms through the Sunday Post-Dispatch and his answer to his accusers is abroad as a matter of moment. The story is one of the most remarkable that has been developed by the World's Fair.

The third of these World's Fair stories of the kind so relished by readers tells of a sunny-souled and courageous young endeavor and astonishing achievement points a moral of helpfulness. She has been sorely handicapped by Fate, but she has overcome the handicap to an almost incredible extent, and she is still intent and happy in the pursuit of her goal. There's a lot more encouragement of the "best" that makes brave hearts and strong men and women.

Not very long ago we had a page by a Western editor-humorist on the subject of "Choosing a Wife and Rearing a Daughter for the Matrimonial Market," and any number of letters have arrived commenting the homely philosophy taught in that article. Well, there's a quaint philosopher now in St. Louis, one who has spent $100,000 in acquiring his philosophy, and he's nearly a careful of epigrams from this picturesque character. They drive straight to the point, terse, vivid, full of the old wisdom born of experience—and they also constitute a character-revelation of one of the best-liked persons in this country.

That recent story about the changes wrought in St. Louis society by the World's Fair has brought many expressions of enjoyment of such a feature. Along the same line, but by way of contrast, there will be found in next Sunday's Post-Dispatch the story of other changes wrought by the World's Fair—not in the upper strata of society, but along one of the oldest streets in St. Louis. This street is now a veritable real-life Pike, all owing to the World's Fair, and its transformation is a strange story. You will enjoy reading it.

In last Sunday's Post-Dispatch was the remarkable story of a $700,000 monastery built in the remote wilds of Arkansas by the faithful labor of a band of devoted monks. It was a significant story of the possibilities of humble toil and we have received letters commending its teaching. In next Sunday's Post-Dispatch will be another story that teaches of the evil likely to come from over-confidence, and it is the reverse of last Sunday's story, for it tells of how the future of a great religious seat of learning in this country has been imperiled by a careless servant. The contrasting lesson of this story can not be missed by readers.

So many people read the Home Page and the page of "New and Strange Things in and About St. Louis" and write to tell of their appreciation that no effort is spared to keep these pages up to the highest standard. In next Sunday's Post-Dispatch the Home Page tells all about the new fall and winter styles, picturing them also, and the "Curio" page is rich with strange stories and striking illustrations. Then interest, and the Funny side filled with the laughable doings of the funny folk, drawn by famous Post-Dispatch artists, and a host of other good things. We expect to hear from readers concerning all of them—and are glad to hear, too, because in this way we learn what our readers enjoy and thus are assisted in the task of continuing to please them.

Goulash is Now King Among Foods

Stew of Emerald Isle Is Displaced by Savory Dish of Hungary.

THE HABIT GROWS AMAZINGLY

In Nearly All Restaurants the Banner of Goulash Now Waves Triumphant and Supreme.

Each dice of beef with a drizzle of foam, browned in the oven half an hour. With carrots and other garden ones. Add cornstarch and spice and make will more fill the savory odor from oven's door. Toss it in a dish—add paprika, a dash. Then turn to the table and eat a goulash.

Alas! how are the mighty fallen! Irish stew, beef stew and all the other stews of our grandfathers will be but a tradition in the days of our grandchildren.

Already they are gone from the "top line" space in the bill of fare, and even the more pretentious menu card will have none of them, even among the entrees, where the less costly dishes are tucked from sight.

Over the wreck of stews that were, goulash has conquered, and no longer will the hunger of the "hall," or, much less, the "war" boarder, deign to be appeased with Irish stew.

"A las! he pot-afu!" Even in Paris the flat has gone forth and real chefs who can look with scorn on a president because of his small salary as compared with theirs, have taken up the cudgels for goulash against the world of other stews.

Formerly an object of suspicion to the country cousin who was being shown the sights of the town and who wanted to taste it because it had such a wicked-sounding name, goulash is now a staple article of diet and soon canned goulash—just pour on a plate and serve—may be making the fortune of its promoter.

Insidiously, almost treacherously, his goulash has penetrated the sanctified domain of the lotus, which to eat was to forget home, goulash will forever wear away from ordinary stews the human whose life it once passed.

It is only a dish of spice that has worked this wonder in the stew and has made goulash so popular that children cry for it. Instantly check the human whose life it once passed.

Not so with the real goulash. It is a work of art. On a base of beef, braised instead of boiled, is erected a superstructure of onions, carrots, tomatoes and a pinch of half a dozen spices. Over this is then poured a rare soup stock made by boiling chicken and when cold, it is well. Add a dash of real Hungarian paprika for flavor and it is real goulash.

This national dish of Hungary is part of the life of that kingdom. Learned men have asserted that humans are great when they rise above food and creature pleasures and in the next paragraph have accepted goulash as the perfection of foods above which it is impossible to rise. Some have even said that Hungary owes her national constitution, which is strongly constructed, to goulash, which thus appears as a preserver of popular liberties.

White goulash is one of the few national institutions of today that did not come into the Mayflower. It was not far behind that ark of colonial furniture. It did not spring into popularity until, for those who knew its virtues were loath to tell others and it was not until the last decade, when means of communication became multiplied that the "goulash taste" began to spread.

Now it has reached the proportions of a habit: Men who once varied that noon-day bill of fare now merely look at the waiter with what has come to be known as the goulash smile. They want no variety.

Already a saying has sprung up, "Goulash for Hungary" that bids fair to replace "caviar for the general" in its universal application.

Many reasons have been advanced for the fall of Irish stew. Could not Irish stew and goulash have gone side by side, each in its own right? Evidently not, and the reason advanced is that Irish stew is never twice alike. There are as many varieties of Irish stew as there are of Irish cooks. Some make it with mutton, some with beef and others with half mutton and half beef.

While Irish stew was paramount patron could follow the mind and the most cooks to another and even more expensive place because he could make their variety of Irish stew.

Real goulash is a compound rather than a mixture. It is a compound that should be handed down from early Hungarian days. The vine of his food need not fear substitution in the high-grade goulash, as such an act on the part of the cook is regarded as a disgrace in his profession, and meriting grave punishment.

This Pretty Little Chinese Bride After Three Days of Seclusion Consented to Pose for the Post-Dispatch

CHINESE HONEYMOON FOLLOWS A DOUBLE WEDDING CEREMONY

Mr. and Mrs. Wong See, Who Needed Two Weddings to Make Them One, Are Now Celebrating Nuptial With Costly Dinners.

After three days of seclusion, following her marriage to Wong See, Toy Yee, the first Chinese bride in St. Louis, has consented to pose before a Post-Dispatch camera.

For three days she was sequestered in her room, attended by her mother and her sister. Mrs. Wong See placed herself before the camera, attired in her costly wedding finery. An Oriental prejudice against posing before a camera made her timid. Her husband was equally reluctant.

For three days he evaded all efforts made by those who wished to see his bride. An ancient Chinese custom, he would report, prevented the bride from being seen for three days. Even at the end of three days he would not consent to have the photograph of either his bride or himself taken.

Stories of the picture of the Empress of China finally won over the opposition of the husband.

Then Wong See and his bride dressed themselves in their wedding garments. Fully an hour was consumed, and not until three maidens had arranged the bride's gown and hair, could the photograph be taken.

The wedding of Toy Yee by Wong See began a year ago. Wong See, who had been a widower for four years, sent to his brother in Canton telling the latter to bring him a wife.

It was the Chinese custom for a young man's father to choose the girl his son is to wed, but Wong See has no father, and his elder brother and his mother chose Toy Yee.

That was according to the American law. Then, after the guests had left the Chinese ceremony was carried out.

First, Toy Yee knelt before the image of Buddha and in a few words pronounced her faith in the god and her thanks to him. Then Wong See did the same.

The presentation of a cup of tea to the bride by one of her friends ended the ceremony.

All that now remains to complete the ceremony are the dinners which Mr. and Mrs. Wong See give their many friends.

In China the custom is to give one big dinner, but as there are no Chinese restaurants in St. Louis large enough to accommodate all the friends at one time, one dinner will be given each Sunday for three Sundays. Wong See estimates the cost of these dinners will be $200 each.

Wong See is one of the most wealthy of St. Louis Chinese. He is a grocer, having an establishment in South Eighth street.

He is the Chinese custom for a young man's father to choose the girl his son is to wed, but Wong See has no father, and his elder brother and his mother chose Toy Yee.

That was according to the American law. Then, after the guests had left the Chinese ceremony was carried out.

SAFE FROM POLICE AT LAST.

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—Chapman's Moran, arrested in many cities and who had achieved a reputation as one of the most successful operators in the country, has been released from the state house of lunacy, where he had been imprisoned in the state penitentiary at Charlestown under his sentence for robbery.

Moran's operations for several years have been carried on in New York, P.

SHERLOCK HOLMES FINDS BRINDLE PUP

Quickly Solves Problem of Costly Canine's Mysterious Disappearance by Marvellous Deductive Powers.

METAL TAG HIS ONLY CLEW

Gets Case Well in Hand and Then Lets St. Louis Police Spring the Climax.

Where is Sherlock Holmes today? Down in Memphis! Hi! Hooley! Sherlock deals in mystery. For the nonce in Tennessee.

Sherlock Holmes has turned up on the detective force of the city of Memphis, Tenn. He has signed under an alias, and he is in disguise, but there is no disguising his work. He laid down for the detective of St. Louis this morning the nearest, prettiest, fouziest bit of detective work that has been done herabouts in many and many a day.

Here are the facts: The Memphis detective was out sleuthing a few days ago and saw a lady pass with a fine brindle bull pup.

Ordinarily a bull pup appeals to the eye of one's pantaloons, but this one appealed to the detective instinct of the St. Louis detective.

"That's a fine dog," he said to her. And a moment later, also to him. "That dog was stolen. There is a body in Memphis who would go for $2000 beauty like that."

The lady went on with the brindle and the sleuth shadowed her. He had her going and outgoings all after and finally observed her disappearance a house which seemed to be her home at least so far as Memphis was concerned. That night the fouziest fellow of them stole into the yard and observed the dog wear a license number 1910.

"Ha!" he said. An hour later the sleuth was in close consultation with his chief, John J. Neeson, the Memphis chief of police.

"This dog doesn't belong in Memphis. He's too fine. He's a beauty. His ears have a slope on them. Even homes with other dogs in Memphis look like a mongrel. His brindle pelt has a gloss on it that makes every other dog in Memphis look like an uncurried hound. That dog was stolen. He's worth $2000, as sure as he eats meat, and his owner will give $500 to get him back."

The next day the sleuth ascertained that the license tag was of the form and type issued at St. Louis.

"Ha!" he said, this being the second time he had said it. Chief Neeson took the evidence and laid it all before Chief Kieley in a letter. Chief Kieley instructed all his captains to make inquiry. They were to see all the known dog fanciers and ask them if they had lost a brindle bull pup. "Remember the number, 1910," said the chief.

There was some house-to-house canvassing in the West End. Even homes with iron dogs on the lawn were approached and interrogated concerning the brindle bull pup.

"Nothing doing," the captains reported to Chief Kieley. The chief called up Capt. McKenna of the Central District.

"You know whose brindle pup could be?" the chief asked. McKenna was not supposed to have fancy dog folk in his district, but he asked about it as a sort of 100 to 1 shot.

McKenna went over to the license office in the City Hall and ascertained that dog number 1910 had been issued to Walter James of 234 Papin street.

patrolman hurried to the house of James.

"We've found him for you!" the patrolman exclaimed upon entering the house. "A different piece of police and detective work ever saw in your life. He is in the hands of the police. He is in the hands of the police. He is in the hands of the police."

SHALL BUTLER CONTROL?

causes of the Butler forces, the third of a series of causes, a full report of which was published in Thursday Post-Dispatch, indicates clearly the intention of Butler and his henchmen to gain control of the Democratic city convention and the Democratic committee. To what desperate acts the gang will resort if cunning fails to attain this end can be imagined from past experience.

Although Mr. Hawes opposed Mr. Folk's candidacy and represents the city machine, he is pledged to the support of the Folk ticket and, it is gratifying to note, stands in this crisis against Butler control and in favor of a clean, strong ticket.
He is practically the head of the Democratic organization in the city, and the brunt of the struggle against the Butler forces must fall on him. There is a prospect in several wards of a desperate struggle between the Hawes and Butler forces.

A victory of the Butler gang would place the Democratic organization completely in the power of the big boss. It would enable him not only to dictate the ticket at the approaching convention, but to control the nominations for next spring.
The effect of a Butler local victory on the national and state ticket in this city might be disastrous. The effect on the city government, the state offices of the greatest importance, including the circuit attorneyship this fall, and the city offices next spring, would be appalling. The situation would not be so bad if there were hope of better things from the Republican organization, but if Butler should practically control the nomination of both parties, it would not be more than he has done in elections.

It is the duty of every good Democrat to rally to the standard of decency against the Butler assault. All Democrats who want the party's good record maintained and who want clean men in the offices and who want to insure a majority for Folk and Folk in St. Louis, should lend a helping hand to men who are fighting the Butler gang.

It is of the utmost importance to this end that peace and good order be maintained at the polls and that the voters be protected in the exercise of the franchise. The police must not only be at the polls in sufficient force to maintain order, but they must see that order is maintained and that the gangs of thugs and repeaters do not intimidate the voters. Preparations should be made now to protect the voters from the thugs.
Gov. Dockery's commendable disposition to keep the police department up to the standard of duty in maintaining order at the polls cannot be shown to better advantage than in disproving
the charge that the Butler influence is strong with the police.

A 14-year-old boy who receives $15,000 apiece for his portraits in Paris, has drawn a most striking picture for the Sunday Post-Dispatch, which forms the first color page in the coming issue of the Magazine. Its weird symbolism reminds one of Fritz. Upon reading the life story of this boy, on page 2 of this Magazine, the reader will no longer wonder at his remarkable talent. Among the other unusually interesting features that will be eagerly read in this issue are John L. Sullivan's philosophy; Gen. Piet Cronje's answer to his French critics; the story of a wonderful blind mute girl who is perfecting her education at the World's Fair; the story of the birth of a new down-town street in St. Louis, as a result of the World's Fair. Marriageable young women will be intensely interested in the story of a certain spot in an Exposition building where Cupid appears to have made his fixed abode. Visit it and get married, seems to be the rule. The wickedest secret society in the world, an Italian who writes brilliantly while asleep, the page on fall and winter styles for women, the page of New and Strange Things in and About St. Louis, and other features complete a Magazine that represents the best talent and painstaking in modern newspaper work.

A REAL SCIENCE OF WEATHER.

Every day for a week the ornate and expensive weather forecasters predicted "thunder showers and cooler." Every day for that week the predictions were followed by warmer weather. In fact the week in which we were promised comfort and coolness turned out to be the most trying and oppressive of the season.

Upon what facts do these students of the elements base their predictions? With insight and a goosebone the oldest inhabitant is well equipped for service as a weather prophet, and the truth suffers no injury when he claims more knowledge than the weather wizards who have thermometers.

barometers, rain gauges, telegraphs and all manner of curious creations of high science. A man with the rheumatism intuites a change. (To intuit means to know without the aid of the pomp of high science.) His storm signals are never false alarms.

The moral is that Uncle Sam should abandon the school of prophets and provide every citizen with a goosebone. This,
with insight or rheumatism, will enable every family to brew its own weather and the taxpayers will save the cost of prediction. And the learned and very estimable gentlemen who spend their time looking for the weather in little tubes and things will be released for service in other departments of meteorology.

NO PLEAS FOR THE PETTY JOBBERS.

When the indictments of Schnell, Kelly and Geraghty for violating the city charter and the state law forbidding any city officer to be interested in contracts with the city were returned, the Globe-Democrat offered no defense or plea in extenuation, as the following editorial, published May 30, 1902, shows:

"An important work has been performed by the April grand jury, which completes its labors tomorrow. It has taken up and continued a trying task. The jury has returned several important indictments touching the conduct of public officials and the public await the evidence with a high degree of interest.
"This investigation should go on until all who have offered, given or accepted bribes, or who have otherwise been guilty of venality in public office, shall be brought to justice. The escape of even one would be a reproach, while the conviction and punishment of all would mark the beginning of a better era for St.
Louis."

The Globe-Democrat did not think that Republicans ought to support men guilty of the offense for which Schnell, Kelly and Geraghty were indicted, when it published the following editorial, on June 3, 1902:

"The duty of St. Louis Republicans with regard to recent revelations of municipal corruption is very plain. They must put the stamp of their emphatic condemnation upon all those connected, directly or indirectly, with schemes of bribery and plunder. Such men are a detriment to the party and should not be allowed in any degree to manage its affairs or shape its policies."
Nor did the Globe-Democrat think that pleas in evasion of the consequences of the law ought to be offered, when it published this editorial, on June 5, 1902:

"Every official guilty of misdemeanor in making city contracts should be dealt with strictly according to the laws."

The law affords the individual ample protection against fraud and extortion. It affords the same protection to the community when public servants do their duty.

COMMISSIONER VARRELMANN ON GRADE CROSSINGS.

Street Commissioner Varrelmann has done good work in his report on the grade crossings. The report paves the way for the abolition of these crossings by showing that such a step is practicable.

Mr. Varrelmann finds that there are about 250 crossings at grade within the city limits, of which but 40 are protected by gates, and of which most have not even a watchman on duty.
Although a large number of these crossings are along the river front, where it is the practice of locomotive drivers to run their engines slowly, the figures show that the law has been generally ignored. Accidents along the river front are rare, but several have occurred, and the law should be enforced.

The street commissioner's recommendations in regard to abolishing at once the most dangerous grade crossings, such as those at Ewing avenue, Compton avenue, Over Grove, Sarah street, etc., should be acted upon without more delay, and the city authorities should follow this by plans for the gradual abolition of all grade crossings, which is being done in New York, Chicago, Indianapolis and other large cities. These crossings have cost enough in life and property. Nothing must be allowed to stand in the way of their abolition.

Indictments come and go. So do prosecutions, convictions and incarcerations. But the old combine stands rock-rooted.
It still does business at the old stand.

It was fortunate for the country that a campaign fund of $5,000,000 was not needed to elect Washington and Jefferson.

When President Roosevelt was a boy he was doubtless a very good one before Christmas.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

MISLEADING SIGNS ON CARS.

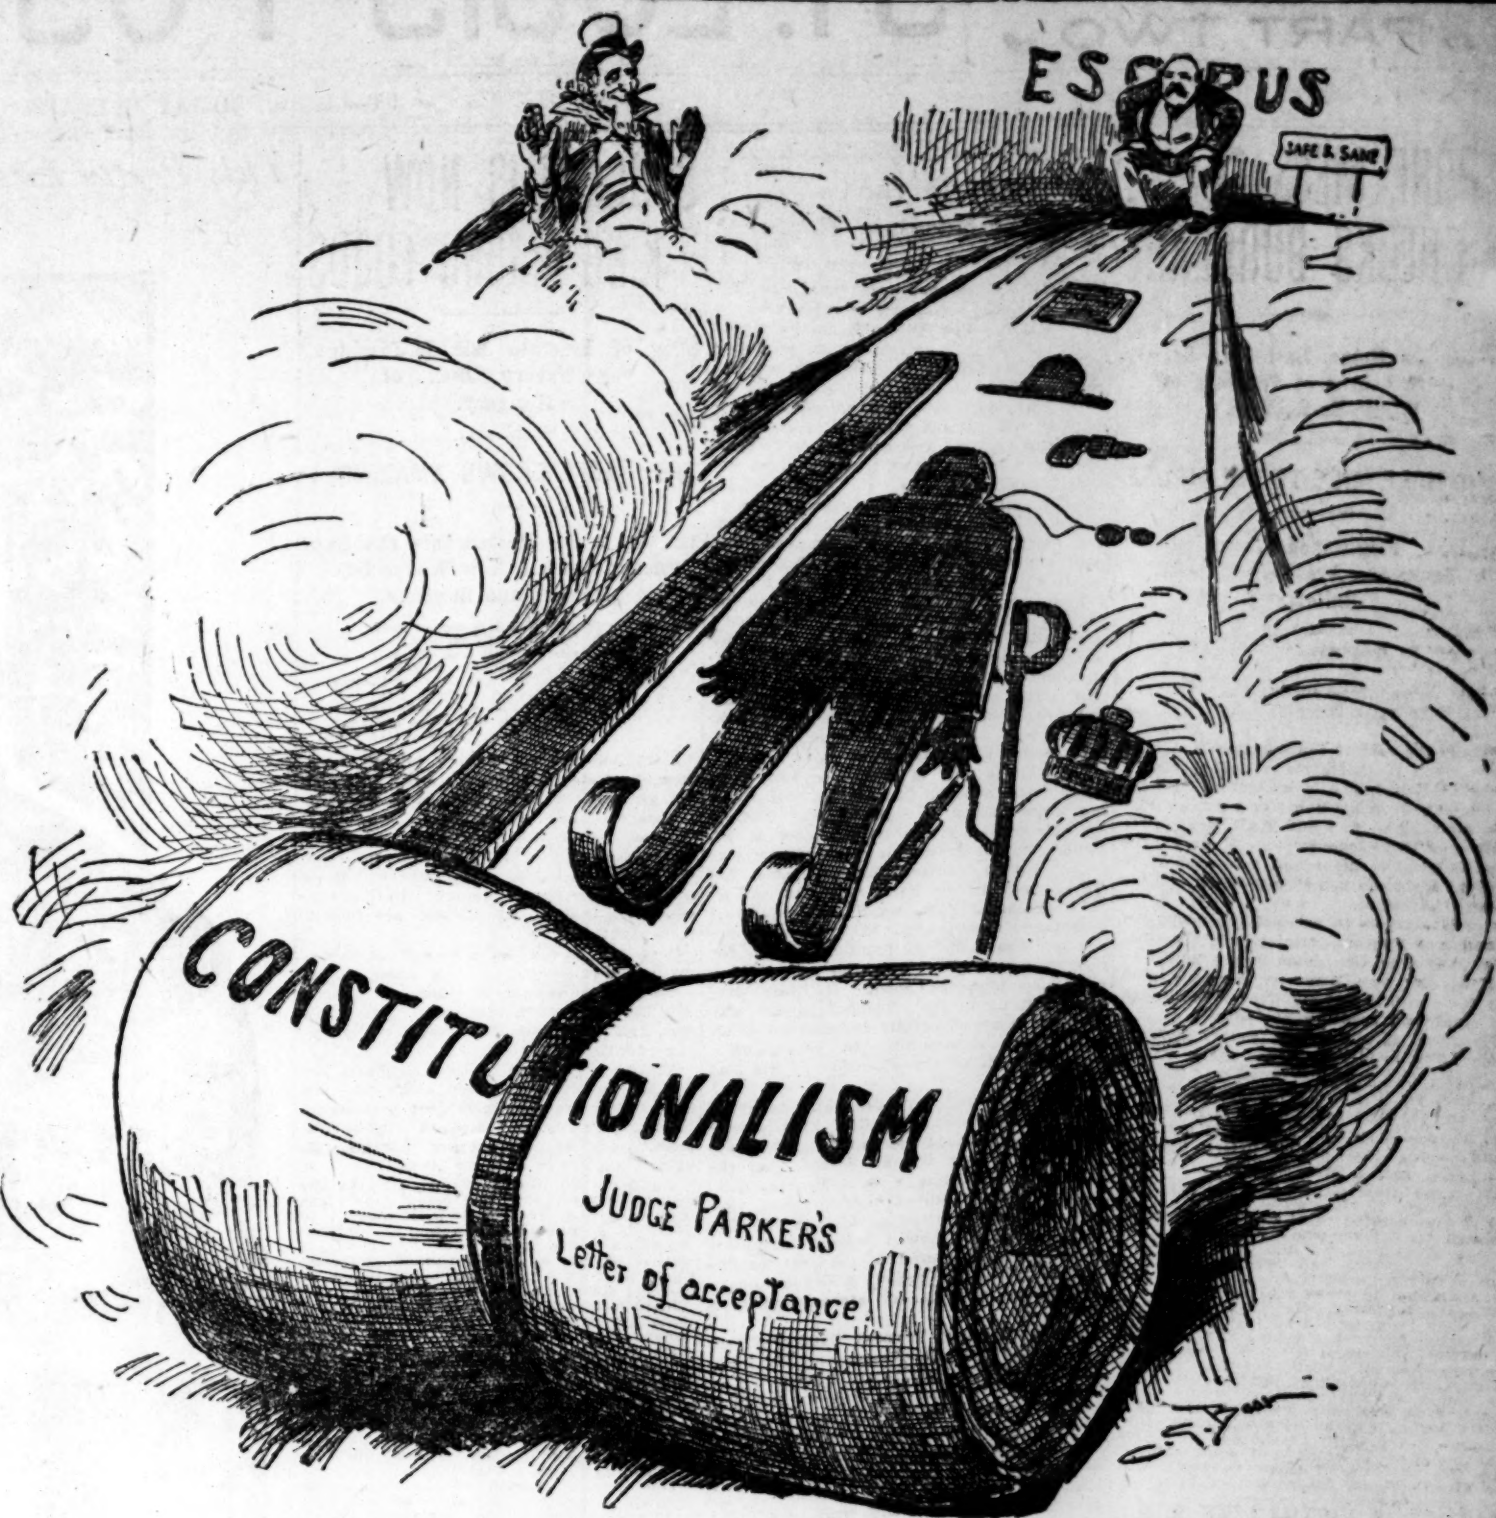

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
I use the street cars every day several times. I so often hear passengers visiting us say after riding some time and approaching the tall buildings, "Why are we not on the car to the Fair?"
The signs on the cars are misleading. The Transit company must know it. Any conductor will tell you they carry scores every day in opposite direction to where they want to go.
In some cases people have missed seeing the Fair at all, having to return home by early train.
The signs read Direct to the World's Fair, no matter which way the car is going. If it is going to the fair, it should read
City and turned over at the end of the run this misleading would be overcome. It seems indeed pitiful so the disappointment and loss of time and sightseeing all because of the misleading sign.

FRANCHISE TAXATION IN MISSOURI.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
Hon. Sam B. Cook, secretary of state, and a member of the State Board of Equalization, is writing a series of articles for the "Columbia, Missouri, Herald," entitled "Assessment of Public Service Corporations." He says: "Other states adjoining Missouri have not fixed anything like so high a franchise value as Missouri. To illustrate: The Eads bridge at St. Louis, one-half of which is taxable in Missouri, and the other half in Illinois is assessed by the Illinois state board at $150,000, while the Missouri state board assesses the Missouri half at $1,700,000. The assessment of public service corporations in Missouri has reached $131,162,959, an increase of nearly $33,000,000 during the last four years. And again the Missouri state tax rate for state revenue purposes is 10 cents on the $100 valuation.
"In Iowa it is 30 cents.
"In Nebraska it is 40 cents.
"In Illinois, 50 cents."
I am going to do a little figuring for Brother Cook and show him that the Illinois tax collector gets more money out of the Eads bridge than does the tax collector of Missouri. It is a well-known fact that in Illinois all property is taxed on one-fifth of its valuation; consequently if you multiply $150,- 000 by 5 the result is $750,000. As against Missouri's valuation of $1,700,000, consequently Illinois collects from the Eads bridge $112,500, while Missouri collects $170,000. Missouri, not any of the other states, never value public service corporations at anything like their real value. Justice Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court in delivering an opinion in one tucky bridge case, laid down the right rule for valuing this class of property, and that was that property should be valued for taxation for what it is worth for income and investment.

TOMATO CATSUP RECIPE.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
Being an inquiry in your "Letters From the People" of how to make tomato catsup keep, I will give my way of cooking. I made my catsup this way last fall and opened the last this year in July,
and it was as nice as when it was cooked fresh.
Get your tomatoes ready and cook them up. Stand aside and let stand until they begin to squish. Just begin to ferment or distill up a little. Work through the sieve; put in a pinch of baking soda, but you may omit and cook in the usual way, and it will keep, if care is taken in putting up.

FLATTENING HIM OUT

By C. G. BUSH.

WORLD AND POST-DISPATCH CARTOONIST.

NEW YORK WORLD'S EDITORIAL TODAY

"THE LAST OF THE ROMANS."

In the death of George Frisbie Hoar of Massachusetts the United States Senate has lost its most conspicuous and representative figure. More than any other member of that body he presented to the popular imagination what Carlyle would have called the type-Senator.

Senator Hoar came into public life almost by inheritance. His father, Samuel Hoar, was one of the most eminent members of the Massachusetts bar and one of the organizers of the Republican party. His maternal grandfather was Roger Sherman, who signed the Declaration of Independence, the Articles of Confederation and the Constitution of the United States, and who, according to Thomas Jefferson, "never said a foolish thing in his life."

Born at Concord and educated at Harvard, Mr. Hoar attained his majority when the slavery question was becoming the acute issue of American politics. Although his ambition was for a legal rather than a political career, it was impossible for a young man of his environment, sympathies and education to hold aloof from the issues that were fast approaching their crisis. Beginning his public career as a Free Soiler, he joined the Republican party when it was organized, and for more than 50 years was an eloquent and able defender of its principles.

His service in Congress extended over a period of 35 years, eight of which were spent in the House and 27 in the Senate. Senator Hoar brought to his public duties a mind thoroughly steeped in the principles of the common law, a profound scholarship, a ripe and just appreciation of good literature, passionate devotion to the cause of human freedom, and an integrity that withstood the intrigues and temptations of political life for more than half a century without disclosing a blot or stain. He entered politics a poor man; he lived modestly and simply; he died a poor man.

In his political principles Senator Hoar has been called a combination of the Black Republican and the Massachusetts Mugwump. It is true that he was an intense partisan. To him the Republican party was always the party of great moral ideas.
A ripe and just appreciation of good literature, passionate devotion to the cause of human freedom, and an integrity that withstood the intrigues and temptations of political life for more than half a century without disclosing a blot or stain. He entered politics a poor man; he lived modestly and simply; he died a poor man.

Yet, while he was an ardent Republican, he was never a servile tool of any Republican administration in power. He followed Charles Sumner in the latter's break with the Grant administration, and vigorously opposed the annexation of Santo Domingo. He was one of the House managers of the impeachment of Belknap. Grant's secretary of war, and he was also a member of the electoral college that snatched the presidency from Samuel J. Tilden. He opposed the acquiescence in the Philippines. He declined President McKinley's insinuating offer of the ambassadorship to Great Britain, made when he was fighting imperialism in the Senate. He voted against the ratification of the treaty of Paris, and has been the most eloquent and convincing of all the opponents of the new imperialism.

If he had been supported by Mr. Bryan and the 10 Democratic senators who voted for the treaty of Paris, the Philippine question might not now be a problem in our politics and a menace to our institutions. There have been few more inspiring examples of political courage and independence in recent times than Senator Hoar showed when he broke with the most popular administration his party ever had and bluntly informed President McKinley that "you cannot maintain a despotism in Asia and a republic in America."

Senator Hoar would not be regarded, perhaps, as a constructive statesman of the first rank. He cannot be compared with Washington, Hamilton, Johnson and Lincoln, or with his shrewd, far-sighted Connecticut grandfather, Roger Sherman. But he conformed more closely to their standards than any man who now sits in the United States Senate. He represented, as none of his colleagues do, the highest traditions of that body. As the World said of him several years ago, he was "one of the few survivors of a time when demonstrated character and capacity for statesmanship were deemed to be a prerequisite to election to the United States Senate."

Now that he is dead the World can say of him that it knows of no man in public life who has displayed a higher order of ability, whose Americanism is of a truer type, and who has evidenced a purer patriotism or a loftier ideal in his devotion to the general welfare.

McKINLEY'S LEGACY.

Speaker Cannon has performed a public service by attacking Judge Parker for his alleged perversion of the late President McKinley's Buffalo speech. He has drawn renewed attention to that enlightening message to the American people which McKinley's party is trying to forget. Here, without abridgement, is exactly what the murdered President said about reciprocity in the last address of his life, and the reader can judge for himself who has been doing the perverting:

"Our capacity to produce has developed so enormously and our products have so multiplied that the problem of more markets requires our urgent and immediate attention. Only a broad and enlightened policy will keep what we have.
No other policy will get more. In these times of marvelous business energy and gain we ought to be looking to the future, strengthening the weak places in our industrial and commercial systems, that we may be ready for any storm or strain.
By sensible trade arrangements which will not interrupt our home production we shall extend the outlets for our increasing surplus. A system of a mutual exchange of commodities is manifestly essential to the continued and healthful growth of our export trade. We must not repose in fancied security that we can forever sell everything and buy little or nothing. If such a thing were possible, it would not be best for us or for those with whom we deal. We should take from our customers such of their products as we can use without harm to our industries and labor. Reciprocity is the natural outgrowth of our wonderful industrial development under the domestic policy now firmly established. What we produce beyond our domestic consumption must have a vent abroad. The excess must be relieved through a foreign outlet, and we should sell wherever we can and buy wherever the buying will enlarge our sales and productions and thereby make a greater demand for home labor. The period of exclusiveness is past. The expansion of our trade and commerce is the pressing problem. Commercial wars are unprofitable. A policy of good will and friendly trade relations will prevent reprisals. Reciprocity treaties are in harmony with the spirit of the times; measures of retaliation are not. If perchance some of our tariffs are no longer needed for revenue or to encourage and protect our industries at home, why should they not be employed to extend and promote our markets abroad?"

As to what he meant by these words, President McKinley has furnished his own commentary by negotiating 11 reciprocity treaties, every one of which has been throttled by the Republican Senate.

And Theodore Roosevelt, who promised to "continue absolutely unbroken the policy of President McKinley," "stands pat" for the maintenance of the exclusivness which McKinley said was past.

"THE papers say," said the Society Girl, "that Col. Walbridge is protected only by the Statute of Limitations. What is that?"

"It's something like the Igorrotes' attire," said the Club Woman.
"Serves the conventions, but makes no pretension of concealment. But did you see, my dear, what Dr. Ladd said at the Pure Food Congress about canned goods? He's the Food Inspector of North Dakota. Why, it's a state, I think, or—oh, no, I remember, now!—it would have been a state last year, with Cookham only the two territories couldn't decide whether they would come in together or separately. So Congress got tired and passed the World's Fair appropriation, and adjourned."

"Well, anyhow, Dr. Ladd says that everything canned is bad. Mr. Brown said that every bad man is canned, but he didn't know the rule worked both ways. Dr.
Ladd says they put adulterants into green fruit to make it look ripe, and other adulterants into over-ripe things to make them look fresh. Mr. Brown said what puzzled him was what they put into the cans to make them look full. And that isn't one of his jokes, my dear. When your time comes to consider household expenses you, too, will resent the inch of atmosphere between the peaches and the top of the can. I wonder
—I just thought of it!—I wonder if that is what is meant by an air-tight can!"

"But Mr. Brown doesn't think that canned goods are nearly as bad as Dr. Ladd says."

"Why not?" asked the Society Girl.

"He says he never saw anything bad that was hard to get into."

"But why," asked the Society Girl, "did Col. Walbridge remind you of adulterated canned goods?"

"Dr. Ladd," said the Club Woman, "says that the only way to tell if the food is good is to see if it can be got into."

JUST A MINUTE For POST-DISPATCH Verse and Humor

Good-By, $100,000.

The World's Fair company has declined to extend the limit for the ship contest, and the last hope of winning the $100,000 prize expires with today.

We surely thought that Santos-D. Would gobble up that prize— That hundred thousand—and that he Would sail around the skies So airily withal that we Would open up our eyes.

Ah, many times we dreamed of him, Among the clouds at ease, Or sailing o'er the rainbow's rim, And doing stunts like these As smoothly as the fishes swim The deepest of all seas.

We thought it would be childish play For him aloft to soar, As swallows dip or eagles gray The mountain tops fly o'er, And give each day a matinee, To rouse our wonder more.

Alas, our dreams were all in vain, For 'e'er on earth will we Behold above the clouds and rain The form of Santos-D. Oh, never will our eyes we strain That vision far to see!

No flying ship has met our gaze, Nor will for many moons; No daring aeronaut we praise And wreath him with festoons. We'll have to be content, these days, With autos and balloons.

Our Internal Works.

The Pennsylvania Medical Society is urging that only experts in physiology be employed to teach that study in the public schools of the state, since, they say, many of the teachers have but little knowledge of the facts they are called upon to impart to pupils.

Indeed, it is puzzling to understand just what exists and is going on inside the human body, notwithstanding the existence of the X-ray. We know from the books that we have a pneumogastric nerve, and we know that sometimes it "acts up" in a most alarming manner, causing us to gasp and start with a swift pain in the region of the heart, and "giving us pause" as to the advisability of making our wills or mending our ways, but who is there among us who has an intimate acquaintance with his pneumogastric nerve, and can tell where it begins and ends and just what the connection is between it, the stomach, the heart and the brain, which have formed a coalition against the peace of the man who is not continually on his good behavior?

We know that we have a liver, the laziest organ that was ever put inside of the human body, and we know that when it loafs we are racked and tortured with a headache, and that our brains become so hard and dry that thought is impossible and comfort out of the question, yet which of us can tell whether the liver is southwest of the heart, northeast of the vermiform appendix or west of the transverse colon, and who knows to a certainty just what it is that happens when the liver goes on a strike and the tongue commences to taste bitter?

We know from the books that we have a diaphragm, but who knows what it is for and what it looks like? Some say its business is to separate the lungs and the kidneys, and others that its function is to keep the heart out of the stomach. These are the ideas we gathered at school, when we made such a bluff at studying physiology, and we have never taken time to learn any more since.

Perhaps if we knew more about our internal works and how to regulate them we would not turn pale and rush home every time our pulses got four beats out of tune. But that would be bad for the doctors.

Interested at the Wrong Time

The church row in Scotland between the "Free" and the "United Free" has brought out a lot of stories more or less illustrative of Scotch character. Here is one: John Sanderson was on his way home from town, where he had been ministering with freedom, when he met the minister. Of course, the church question was uppermost in John's mind. Therefore he said: "What about the decession of the House of Lords. Are we to lose the kirk?" "Come and see me when you are sober, John, and I'll tell you all about it," answered the preacher, good-naturedly. "Man, you're daft," hiccoughed John. "I dinna care a hang about the kirk when I'm sober."—Chicago Chronicle.

THIRST QUENCHED BY FIRE ALARM

World's Fair Visitor at Christian Endeavor Hotel Mistakes Signal
Box for Water Cooler.

ESCAPES IN SUNSET PAJAMAS

Story Is Told, However, by a Broken Glass on the Floor Near the Alarm Box.

Hereafter when firemen at the World's Fair grounds respond to an alarm, they may not be able to say, with any assurance, "Here we go to mail a letter," neither will they be able to tell whether it is that or a call to come and pump a hotel guest full of water.

The World's Fair visitor who mails his letters in fire alarm boxes now has a rival in the person who mistakes a fire alarm box for a water cooler.

A man stopped at the Christian Endeavor Hotel Thursday night, who hails from a section of Missouri where fire alarm boxes are not the fashion. He awoke with a raging thirst. The water in his room was so flat that it only tantalized him. He recommenced.

There was nothing doing in the dimly-lighted corridor, so he called forth arrayed in sunset pajamas, in quest of something wet.

He was not looking for fire water, but when he came upon a fire alarm box, he had no doubt, in his drowsy condition, that it was loaded with water.

Pumping around, he pulled the alarm and raised a clatter that made him nearly jump out of his pajamas and scared the throat out of him so effectively that he will not be likely to drink any water for a month.

The firemen in the distant engine houses did not slide down the pole more swiftly than the guest slid down the corridor toward his room. He immediately stimulated profound sleep, which continued through all the confusion incident to the arrival of the firemen and their search for the fire.

The disturbed fire alarm box and the glass which the guest had dropped in his fight told the story and the firemen returned ready to their houses.

Money Found.

That is what some people say of profits accruing from renting rooms. Good rooms can be obtained quickly through Post-Dispatch Wants.

BURGLAR WHO SHOT WOMAN FOR RESISTING VISITED MANY HOMES

Four Houses in Lansdowne and Two in East St. Louis Robbed in Same Night—Miss Pope, Robber's Victim, Recovering From Her Wounds.

Miss Fannie Pope of 1708 Lincoln avenue, East St. Louis, who was shot twice in an encounter with a burglar Wednesday night, is in a critical condition at her home. The two wounds, one in the breast and the other in the right knee, are serious and painful, but her physician says she will recover.

Three other houses in the same block in Lincoln avenue and one in the next block were entered the night of the shooting. One of these, that of John Grant at 1714 Lincoln avenue, just three doors from Miss Pope's home, was entered only a few minutes after the shooting. Grant, who had been awakened by his wife, saw a man running away from the house, but fearing that it was a neighbor did not shoot.

The 1700 block of Lincoln avenue is in Lansdowne, an East St. Louis suburb. The scene of the burglaries is an isolated row of one-story frame cottages, all of which are on the south side of the street.

Three other houses in the same block which were entered Wednesday night are those of Frank Turner at 1713 John Grant at 1714, and James Hume at 1716 Lincoln avenue. In all four houses entrance had been gained through an east kitchen window. In each case the window had been opened and a chair withdrawn. The burglar used the chair to climb into the house. In the Hume house the door between the kitchen and the rest of the house was locked and the intruder could get no further than the kitchen. In the two other houses, those of Grant and Turner, the burglar was scared off before he entered the sleeping rooms.

In the next block, the family of John Vance of 1708 Madison avenue was aroused by a burglar whom they succeeded in frightening away before anything was taken.

A tramp who was seen in the neighborhood Wednesday is suspected of being a burglar, but as yet the police have secured no trace of the man.

Two other East St. Louis residences which were burglarized Wednesday night are those of Sam Ridgeway, 1718 Ohio avenue and John Dorman, who lives at the corner of Eighteenth street and Ridge avenue.

MISS RITCHIE GLAD SHE WAS JILTED

London Lord Mayor's Daughter Consoles Herself by Congratulations on Escaping Bad Match.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—It is probable that the true reasons which caused J. A. C. McCalman to desert his bride-elect, Miss Ritchie, the second daughter of Sir James Ritchie, lord mayor of London, two days before the day assigned for the wedding, will never be divulged. He has disappeared, leaving no address behind him, but is supposed to be making himself scarce somewhere on the continent.

For some time to come he will certainly find London too hot to hold him. Miss Ritchie, meanwhile, is doing her best to console herself with the reflection that she has had a narrow escape from a marriage that would have proved a failure, but does not find it so easy as some of her philosophic friends who have undertaken to console her with no recollection of the fact that she is a girl.

"McCalman may change his mind," says Miss Ritchie's brother, "but my sister will never change hers. She has done with it forever, and we shall assist her to forget the past as quickly and completely as it is humanly possible."

One of the most singular features of the case is the extraordinary pains taken by the faithless lover to give publicity to his own perjury. He called personally at the prominent newspaper offices before his flight and announced his intention of doing the matrimonial noose. But with that singular lack of appreciation of opportunities to obtain news which is characteristic of British journalists he was not asked to give any explanation.

McCalman adopted a more discreet method of conveying the tidings of his matrimonial repudiation to the bride's family, perhaps because he feared the possible consequences of an encounter with Miss Ritchie's big brother. Just before he skipped he mailed a letter to Sir James Ritchie, telling him that he had decided not to marry his daughter. He had been expected to take lunch that day at the Mansion house, the stately official residence of the lord mayor, but to the surprise of his hosts he did not come. No message received from him to account for this absence.

"He must have been unavoidably detained somewhere," said Miss Ritchie, who had not the slightest suspicion that anything was wrong. "He will certainly be here to dinner in the evening, she added, cheerfully. While she was speaking her lover was speeding away from London as fast as a railway train could carry him. The dinner hour came and the rich wedding gifts were displayed about the room, but the bride did not show up. Just as the family had taken their seats at the table McCalman's letter arrived. In a moment Miss Ritchie had fled, weeping from the festive board to her bedroom. Sir James was shocked and in indignation and the big brother was fervently wishing that he had McCalman's head in a chancery.

DIVED THROUGH CAR WINDOW TO LIBERTY

Alonso Whiteman, Once Millionaire, Arrested on Forgery Charge in St.
Louis, Eludes Officers.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 30.—While being brought from St. Louis to Buffalo Alonso J. Whiteman escaped from Detective-Sergeant Solomon of Buffalo and William H. Field, assistant superintendent of a detective agency here, by jumping from the Lake Shore fast mail train near Dunkirk.

The search for him has so far been unsuccessful. Whiteman and the two officers were in a stateroom on a Pullman car. Whiteman was lying on a sofa. The train was pulling out of the Dunkirk yards and was running at about 30 miles an hour. Whiteman left his seat and jumped head-first through the car window. Solomon and Field rushed to stop him, but were too late. They saw Whiteman on the ground as the train whizzed by.

The two officers demanded that the conductor stop the train, but he refused on the ground that the train was carrying United States mails on a fast schedule. The train was stopped at Silver Creek, however, just for a moment to allow the detectives to alight, and they returned to Dunkirk on an accommodation train and commenced a search for Whiteman.

Whiteman was being brought to Buffalo on a charge of forgery and grand larceny. He is suspected of being implicated in irregularities in which the Fidelity Trust Co. of Buffalo was the victim. Whiteman was a graduate of Columbia Law School, and after he had been graduated went to Michigan and Minnesota. He was elected to the Minnesota state senate when about 25 years old. He is the author of the Whiteman election law, which is now in force in Minnesota. Since 1880 he has been arrested several times in various parts of the country.

THE KNOWING ONES

Are Many in St. Louis.
Hundreds of our readers know all about Doan's Kidney Pills. They have heard their neighbors discuss their merits and they have endorsed them publicly themselves. Read what this citizen says. Can you ask for better proof?

J. D. Pettell, carpenter, of 2861 Garfield av., says: "I injured my back while lifting and afterwards was subject to attacks of dull aching across the loins for two years. I knew from the backache and the excessive action of the kidneys secretions that my kidneys were at fault, but I was at a loss to know what course to pursue to get relief. An advertisement about Doan's Kidney Pills led me to go to the Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. for Doan's Kidney Pills. The use of one box stopped the dull aching and corrected the action of the kidney secretions. Since then I have on more than one occasion emphatically recommended the use of the preparation.

I would be only too pleased to continue my endorsement.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—DOAN'S—and take no substitute.

"Show Me!"

Now that is just what the "Mayfield" wants to do, and they invite you to call at their Retail Store, 826 N. Broadway, where they are selling to local consumers the best values in Clothing ever seen for the same money—they do not fill retail orders from outside the city.

It's little use to quote prices away from the goods for they must be side by side to properly judge them, besides they, too, believe it's best to "show you," so kindly give them the opportunity. It will pay you to walk from home to buy the underwear they are retailing at wholesale prices; fresh, new goods and at beginning of season. Mothers can save dollars, too, on Boy's and Children's Clothing.
